R.I. nightclub fire: The families of four nightclub employees killed in the 2003 West Warwick, R.I., fire are asking a judge to order the club's owners to pay death benefits and lost wages.

Jeffrey and Michael Derderian, owners of The Station nightclub, did not have workers' compensation insurance when their club burned to the ground.

The Station fire, sparked by a rock band's pyrotechnics, killed 100 people and injured more than 200 others on Feb. 20, 2003.

Hunting bin Laden claim: A man who told authorities in Detroit that he was headed to Syria to try to collect a $25 million bounty on Osama bin Laden faces charges of attempting to smuggle more than $13,000, a Taser stun device, ammunition and radiation detectors.

Mihsen was indicted on charges of making false statements to federal investigators, trying to smuggle bulk cash out of the United States and attempting to export money and goods to Syria without a permit.

Secret Bush tapes: Tapes of President Bush that were secretly recorded by an old friend and released to the media now are in the possession of the president's private attorney, the White House said Tuesday.

Doug Wead allowed journalists to hear and broadcast the tapes as he promoted his new book on presidential parents. But he said last week he had regrets about that and was turning the tapes over to Bush and giving the proceeds from his book to charity.

Pope's health: Pope John Paul II is "progressively improving" and following church activities daily, the Vatican said Thursday, suggesting he might be released from a hospital in time for Easter celebrations on March 27.

Papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said the wound on John Paul's throat after surgery is running a breathing tube was healing.

World Bank leadership: World Bank President James Wolfensohn said Thursday that U.S. Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz was no longer in the running to head the Washington-based international financial institution.

The New York Times reported early this week that Wolfowitz was under serious consideration to become the next president of the World Bank, which will be open when Wolfensohn leaves June 1 after two five-year terms.

Pakistan gang rape: Mukhtar Mai, victim of a gang rape, sheds tears Thursday after a court's decision in Multan, Pakistan, that overturned the conviction of a village elder and four other men. Italian mafia raids: Police launched a pre-dawn raid Thursday targeting more than 50 suspected mobsters, most of whom are believed to be involved in a bloody turf war with a competing clan, authorities said.

Police in Naples and several other cities were seeking 52 suspects, including Paolo di Lauro, the alleged head of one of the feuding factions of the Camorra crime syndicate whose turf war has claimed dozens of lives in the suburbs of Naples over the past year, said an official.

Control over the drug trade is believed to be at the origin of the clan war.

Space station supplies: A Russian cargo ship carrying food, equipment and other supplies docked successfully with the international space station Wednesday, an official said.

The unmanned Progress M-S2 spacecraft had lifted from the Russian-leased Baikonur cosmodrome in Kazakhstan on Monday, carrying about 2.75 tons of food, water, fuel and research equipment for Russian cosmonaut Salizhan Sharipov and U.S. astronaut Leroy Chiao.

Budget airline troubles: A British court ruled Wednesday that budget airline Ryanair misled customers about the price of some flights, but said it could keep listing before-tax fares as long as it warned customers it was doing so.

A Chelmsford Crown Court jury found the Dublin-based Ryanair Holdings PLC guilty of six breaches of the Consumer Protection Act for Web site promotions in which it omitted the words "excluding tax."

EUCOM seeks to clarify transformation

Baumholder not part of Army's "enduring" military community plan

By TERRY BOYD
Stars and Stripes

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — A report in Thursday's Stars and Stripes that Baumholder would remain a key part of the Army's transformation plans in Europe surprised some German workers who thought the base's days were numbered.

On Thursday, Marine Gen. James Jones, commander of the U.S. European Command, was quick to correct the record. "I'd clarify that Baumholder is not a part of the Kaiserslautern Military Community, which does have strategic enduring value. Baumholder currently houses units of the 1st Armored Division, which may return to the U.S. at some point in the future, so it's not an 'enduring' installation as such," Jones said in a prepared statement issued to Stars and Stripes on Thursday.

During an interview Wednesday with Stars and Stripes, Jones said Baumholder would survive as one of four U.S. Army hubs in Germany in the ongoing restructuring of U.S. military bases in Europe.

Many of the 500 German employees at Baumholder saw the Thursday Stars story, said Harald Weber, deputy chairman of Baumholder's Betriebsvertretung, or German works council: "We were really surprised."

By early Thursday, however, installation management officials told workers that Baumholder, the largest combat arms base outside the United States, it is not on the list of enduring military communities,

Weber said.

In addition, Jones' statement said, Stuttgart will remain the home of EUCOM headquarters.

While it is a joint Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine command, EUCOM officials "consider it one of the four major enduring U.S. military communities in Germany administered by the U.S. Army."

"I want to emphasize that the vision for our entire military force including all services in Europe is clear."

But implementing that vision, he said, "is a work in process, including complex negotiations and decision processes. We are able to discuss some details, while others remain pre-decisional."

Two years of awaiting Baumholder's fate have made German workers at the base "nervous," Weber said. He added that he believes the release of a final Base Realignment and Closure list of domestic bases — scheduled for May — may hasten final word on European bases, he said.

If Baumholder doesn't make it, it will be a crushing blow for workers in this underdeveloped corner of Germany, according to Weber.

Baumholder, about 40 miles from Ramstein, currently has an American population of 12,000 people including 5,600 soldiers in seven major 1st AD units and a dozen non-division units.

"I can say that this area is the end of the world," he said. "If the Army goes out, it's going to be an economic problem for the whole area. 'It's going to be a disaster.'"

Study shows Army's black enlistments drop

Number of African-American volunteers falls 41 percent since 2000

By TOM PHILPOTT

Special to Stars and Stripes

The Army's wartime recruiting challenge is aggravated by a sharp drop in black enlistments over the last four years, which internal Army and Defense Department polls trace to an unpopular war in Iraq and concerns among blacks with Bush administration policies.

The Army is straining to meet recruiting goals in part because the number of black volunteers has fallen 41 percent — from 23.5 percent of recruits in fiscal 2000 down steadily to 13.9 percent in the first four months of fiscal 2005.

"It's alarming," said Maj. Gen. Michael D. Rochelle, commanding general of the U.S. Army Recruiting Command in Fort Knox, Ky.

No single factor explains the drop, Rochelle said, but clearly the propensity of black youth to enlist is impacted by the war and increasingly by views of parents, teachers, coaches, clergy and other "influencers."

"The influencers of these youth are causing them to be less inclined to listen to what good the Army could do for them in the long run," said Rochelle, one of the Army's most senior black officers.

Officer recruiting is hit, too. Black enrollment in the Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps program is down 36 percent since 2001.

The Marine Corps also reports a drop in black recruits but its racial gap on recruits is now suspect due to a government policy, effective Jan. 1, 2003, that allows recruits and all new federal workers to decline to identify their race. The Army also found a way to continue to track accurately its racial data, said S. Douglas

Smith, spokesman for the recruiting command.

Rep. Charles B. Rangel, a Democrat whose New York City district includes Harlem, said he isn't too surprised by the Army recruiting data.

"I have not found a black person in support of this war in my district," he said. "The fact that every member of the Congressional Black Caucus emotionally, politically and vigorously opposes this war is an indication of what black folks think throughout this country."

Rangel also said there was "overwhelming disappointment" among blacks after Bush, in a disputed election, became president in 2001, and the disappointment "plummeted after he declared war in Iraq."

Results of the Defense Department's own Youth and Influencer Polls, conducted last May, affirm that administration policies and the Iraq war have lowered the propensity of black youth to enlist, particularly in the Army and Marine Corps, the ground forces taking most of the casualties.

While the war reduced the likelihood of youth in general to join the military, says the Youth Poll report, "black youth reported being more negatively affected... Black youth were less supportive of U.S. troops' presence in Iraq, less likely to feel the war was justified, more disapproving of the Bush administration's handling of foreign affairs and more disapproving of its use of U.S. military power than were whites or Hispanics."

Black youth unemployment remains above 10 percent, higher than for Hispanics and double that for whites. Blacks also tend to view military pay as more attractive than do other racial groups.

In years past, such factors enticed a disproportionate number of African-American youth to see opportunity in the Army. In some years since the draft ended in 1973, the percentage of blacks among Army volunteers approached 30 percent.

In fiscal 2000, blacks still represented almost a quarter of Army recruits. That percentage fell to 22.7 in 2001, 19.9 in '02, 16.4 in '03, 15.9 in '04, and 13.9 percent through four months of fiscal 2005. No such decline has been seen among Hispanics or white recruits. Indeed, their percentages among Army recruits grew during the first Bush administration.

Because blacks are 14 percent of all recruit-age youth, their recruiting numbers remain "acceptable," said Rochelle, proportional to blacks in society. But the steep drop in black recruits "overdue does hurt plans to 'grow the Army,'" he conceded. Congress has ordered a 30,000 increase in the number of active-duty soldiers by October 2007.

Rangel said many blacks still are enticed into service by benefits and cash incentives, which are rising sharply.

Another Army-directed poll, the U.S. Military Image Study, is posted on a Defense Contracting Command Web site, likely by mistake. Based on interviews with 3,236 youth ages 16 to 24, this study says, "Recruiting an all-volunteer Army in times of war is increasingly difficult."

While money for college remains a major motivator to enlist, the Iraq war leaves youth, particularly blacks, conflicted.

Fear of being killed or injured was the top reason to avoid service for 26 percent of youth in 2004, almost double the 14 percent reported in 2000.

Band concert unites high school rivals

Naples, Aviano perform during music month

BY JASON CHUDY
Stars and Stripes

NAPLES, Italy — The halls of Naples High School echoed with music Wednesday as its band members joined with those from Aviano High School for their first combined concert.

And for one day at least, their traditional sports rivalry was set aside as the students practiced together and then performed for a about 200 concertgoers.

"The bands played well together," said Aviano ninth-grader and tenor saxophone player Josh Kelsey after the concert. "Really well, considering our rivalry."

While the rivalry remained in most of the students' minds, it was quickly drowned out by the music.

"It's not a competition," Naples band director Gary Marvel said about the day. "This gives them experience so that they'll be better musicians."

"Music, in this case, is a win-win situation," said Aviano band director Robert Benson. "To me ... it's partly corny, but it's a harmony. They're working together in a harmonious way."

Marvel and Benson came up with the idea for a combined concert in October 2004 to coincide with Music in Our Schools Month, which kicked off in March 1985.

The 31 Aviano eighth- to 12th-graders arrived Tuesday in Naples, stayed with host families that night and joined with the nearly 50 Naples band members Wednesday morning for a day's worth of practice.

The musicians were broken into small groups and spent part of the day with members of the Joint Force Command and 6th Fleet bands honing their skills.

stares — and even a few dance moves — from the younger pupils.

"It's always good when bands from other schools play together," Drefke said as the students took a short break. "It's going very well. We're just coming in and polishing the music for tonight."

The students and directors said those few hours of practice really made a difference in the performance.

"They helped us clean up our sound," Kelsey said of the military band members. "They helped out a lot."

And as the first notes of "Torch of Liberty" echoed through the school's gym that evening, all the day's work seemingly paid off. The combined band performed four numbers, each school performed one individually, then the Naples Jazz Band finished the concert.

Each director also took turns directing the joint band.

"We clicked really quickly," Naples ninth-grader and piano player Meghan Louk said after the show. "It's fun to see the other band [members] and play with them. It's different."

Marvel said he hopes to take the Naples band to Aviano for another joint concert later in the school year. "Imagine what we could do if we had more than one day," Benson said.

C-130 Hercules cargo planes still face restrictions

BY RUSS RIZZO
Stars and Stripes

Three weeks after the Air Force put scores of its C-130 Hercules planes on restricted flying status and grounded others because of structural concerns, it is still unclear whether the restricted planes will be able to fly with the same cargo loads as before.

A total of 60 C-130s were placed on restricted flying status and 30 more were grounded. Six C-130s at Ramstein Air Base, Germany — a third of the base's fleet of 18 planes — are on restricted status. They can fly, but must carry 10 percent less weight when loaded with fuel and cargo, according to guidelines issued by the C-130 System Program Office at Robins Air Force Base, Ga., which manages the fleet. None of the C-130s at Ramstein is grounded.

The 86th Airlift Wing, which operates the planes at Ramstein, is able to complete its mission despite the restrictions, said Mike Young, a spokesman for the wing. Young could not elaborate on how the restrictions affected the wing, and wing commanders declined repeated requests by Stars and Stripes for interviews.

The restrictions came after the System Program Office found that maintenance crews were reporting stress cracks in center wing boxes that were larger and more widespread than had been predicted, Hays said. The center wing box is where the wings meet the frame.

"We had expected to see the cracks," said Lt. Col. Mark Hays, deputy director of the C-130 System Program Office. "What we didn't expect to see was the severity of the cracks."

Forty-three C-130s with the most flying hours were grounded in September until a larger review was completed, Hays said. Then the Air Force grounded or restricted planes based on a formula of flying time and the flying conditions the planes saw.

Center wing boxes must be replaced on all 30 grounded planes before they can fly again.

For the restricted planes, the Air Force has not decided whether

Pentagon flag on the block by necessity, owner says

The Associated Press

ORANGE, Va. — David Nicholson says he turned away a $100,000 offer for a flag pulled from the wreckage of the Sept. 11, 2001, attack on the Pentagon.

Now, the former auctioneer has an aggressive form of kidney cancer and says he'll sell the flag on eBay to defray medical bills.

Nicholson, 44, said he hopes the 10-day online auction, starting Friday, will generate enough money to help him pay for expensive specialized chemotherapy at Duke University.

"I've got to do what I've got to do," says Nicholson. "Maybe that's why I found the flag."

The flag arrived May 2002 at Nicholson's Orange County auction house tucked among several boxes full of debris from a Pentagon site under construction when the attack occurred.

Nicholson preserved the 5-by-8-foot flag by having a wood-and-Plexiglas frame built for it. The banner was also framed along with several documents, one listing the name of every innocent person killed at the Pentagon and on American Airlines Flight 77.

A Charlottesville television station did a story on Nicholson's find, CNN picked it up, and soon Nicholson was fielding numerous purchase offers for his treasure. At one point, he declined an offer of $100,000 for the flag, deciding, instead, to share it with public groups on special occasions.

That has all changed now with his cancer diagnosis.

Nicholson knows he may not live long enough to see his 6-year-old daughter, Alia, reach adulthood. His wife, Elsie, takes care of his daughter and her sons, Alec and Zachary Branch, who are 13 and 10. And she accompanies Nicholson for his two-week stays at Duke for chemo.

While Nicholson has health insurance, the family has no steady income and is struggling to pay bills.

Nicholson plans to start the bidding on eBay at $25,000, hoping it will bring enough money to not only ease his family finances but provide for his loved ones if he doesn't recover.

The eBay winner will receive the framed flag, its documentation, a letter of authenticity from the construction company that flew the flag on the Pentagon site and a copy of the videotaped CNN story about it.

WWII GI's remains found in Germany

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — A military funeral is planned next week for Pfc. Preston "Pug" Harris, a World War II soldier whose remains were recently discovered and returned to Texas.

In 1944, the 23-year-old soldier from Greenville was part of the 405th Infantry Regiment, 102nd Infantry Division that was fighting along the heavily fortified Siegfried Line near the Germany-Netherlands border.

Records show that Harris was killed Nov. 22, 1944, near Beeck, Germany. Harris was officially listed as killed in action, but the location of his body was unknown. The family was told that he might have been buried in an unmarked grave at a military cemetery in the Netherlands.

In June 2003, a German company removing unexploded ordnance from the battlefield uncovered human remains in an unmarked grave.

The personal items found — a shaving brush, parts of a comb and boot, a worn set of dog tags — led officials to believe the remains were that of a U.S. soldier.

The remains were transferred to the Hurler War Cemetery and later to the U.S. Army Mortuary Affairs Activity in Landstuhl, Germany.

A team from the Joint POW/MIA Accounting Command at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii went to the Beeck area last summer and excavated the site, said Harris' nephew, Knighton Hudson, 50, of Wylie. Investigators used dental and medical records to identify Harris.

A military representative later visited Harris' family and returned some of the personal items.

Harris' military funeral is scheduled for March 12 in Greenville.

Harris was the youngest of 10 children. The only surviving family member is his 89-year-old sister, Maple Harris Hudson, who is still coming to terms with the discovery, said her son.

"I think more than anything she was heartened that she was able to fulfill her mother's wishes to bring him home," Knighton Hudson said. "I really don't think it's hit her yet."

Through the years, the old photographs and letters from Harris have been lost. Only an old photograph from a local history book shows him in his Army uniform.

Knighton Hudson said that as a child, he heard that his uncle loved horses and was fond of smoking a corn-cob pipe.

"He was a farmer from a whole family of farmers," he said. "As far as I know, his aspiration was to come back home and be a farmer. That was what he wanted to do."

Women veterans statue scrapped

W.Va. committee says some concerned piece isn't feminine enough

By BRIAN FARKAS

The Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — A design for a statue honoring the state's female veterans was scrapped amid concerns that the figure of a muscular woman in military fatigues and T-shirt was not feminine enough.

State Division of Veteran Affairs Director Larry Lynch said Tuesday a review committee polled women veterans and found they opposed the design created by Charleston artist Joe Mullins.

"The statue that Mr. Mullins created is dead," Lynch said.

Mullins, who previously sculpted four statues for a War Memorial at the state Capitol Complex, said he was commissioned to do a work honoring West Virginia's 7,000 women veterans by a different agency — the State Division of Culture and History.

Mullins said the design was approved by the agency in 1999 and he already has been paid $50,000 for the work. He said the culture and history division required him to provide a sculpture of a woman in military fatigues.

"That was the state of West Virginia's idea," he said. "It also needs to be made clear to my future clients that I'm not the bad guy here."

Culture and history division officials said the agency is no longer involved in the project, except for providing $100,000 to have the finished work installed on the Capitol grounds.

Mullins' work is not complete and has only been presented to veterans and state officials as a model. But it drew complaints from some female veterans who said the figure lacks femininity, Lynch said. Some vets and lawmakers also complained the soldier is not depicted wearing a regulation military uniform.

"It's a beautiful piece of art. It's just not what West Virginia veterans think of when they think of women in the military," said Christie Utt, an Air Force veteran who chaired the Veterans Affairs committee.

The final design may not be a statue at all, said Utt, who also is a state deputy attorney general. "Perhaps a living memorial. A garden," she said. "I think there are a lot of ideas roaming around."

Fisher foundation searches for new sites to house war injured

BY SANDRA JONTZ
Stars and Stripes

As more troops return from war zones needing long-term medical care, the Fisher House Foundation has shifted its focus on where to build houses that accommodate the wounded and their visiting families, officials said.

"We have made supporting servicemen and women wounded in Iraq and Afghanistan, and their families, our No. 1 priority ... which includes building Fisher Houses at medical centers where they're going to be receiving their long-term care," said Jim Weiskopf, foundation spokesman.

The nonprofit foundation founded in 1990 by philanthropists Zachary and Elizabeth Fisher originally built houses only at military treatment facilities. Ten years ago, it expanded and built its first Department of Veterans Affairs facility house in Albany, N.Y. There now are six VA Fisher Houses, and a seventh near completion.

"The change for us at the VA is that the Fisher House Foundation has committed to adding houses at our facilities," said Jim Manske, director of social work services at the VA.

"We're beginning to see a lot of casualties from Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom being treated at our facilities, patients who are still on active duty, and their families are coming from long distances and need lodging," Manske said. A Fisher House is "a home away from home," conceived to give families a place to stay while loved ones receive medical care. They feature private bedrooms and common kitchens, laundry facilities and dining and living rooms, and normally are located within walking distance of the treatment center or have transportation available.

About 8,500 families a year stay at the foundation's 32 Fisher Houses. Two of them are at the Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany, the sole location outside of the United States.

The foundation's firm-to-build list of eight more facilities throughout the United States would place houses at military and VA medical treatment facilities that specialize in treating combat-related injuries, such as traumatic brain injuries, severe burns and paralysis.

"During peacetime, the largest group we take care of are veterans suffering from cancer and undergoing radiation and chemotherapy treatment," Weiskopf said. "But gradually, over time and because of the operations in Iraq and Afghanistan, that focus has changed to young soldiers ... who at some point in time, do not need to occupy a hospital bed but need to go to the hospital every day."

A VA facility Fisher House might be built in Richmond, Va., at the center that specializes in traumatic brain and spinal cord injuries. "We haven't even received a formal proposal, but we just know it's coming," Weiskopf said of the Hunter Holmes McGuire VA Medical Center.

Across the board, occupancy is at 90 percent or greater, but for those houses treating patients from Iraq and Afghanistan, occupancy is 100 percent with wait lists, Weiskopf said.

For those families, the average less than $10 a day fee is waived. And if the Fisher House is full, the foundation ensures the family does not pay to stay at an on-base facility, such as a Navy Lodge, or a local hotel, he said.

At hearing, injured reservists decry poor health care

BY LEO SHANE III
Stars and Stripes

WASHINGTON — Petty officer Anthony Cuomo believes if he were an active-duty sailor, the Navy would have already taken care of the shoulder injury he suffered while training in Iraq.

But instead the reservist, who joined after serving as a New York City firefighter during the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, said he has undergone 21 months of confusion over his military status and rights, and is still waiting for additional surgeries to repair torn muscles.

"In my mind, there is one word for this discrimination," he said Wednesday, during testimony before a congressional panel investigating the treatment of wounded troops.

Top military officials acknowledged at the hearing that such health care inequities do exist, despite efforts to ensure equitable care for all those injured in combat zones.

One man praised the medical professionals who have treated him — one doctor told him he was a "sailor and a patient, not a reservist" — but said administrators have delayed and denied treatments for him.

At one point, he said, Navy officials classified his debilitating shoulder and head pain as "minor" and noncombat-related. His shoulder separation came during a training exercise inside Iraq.

Members of Congress called that testimony upsetting.

"I'm disappointed that we're back here again to hear about the same problems that we've all worked so hard to fix," said Rep. J. McHugh, R-N.Y., chairman of a House subcommittee on military personnel. "These reports are disturbing."

Chief Warrant Officer Stephen Keeton said after initially receiving exemplary treatment overseas for his injuries, he returned home to find discrepancies how reservists were handled.

"I was really dismayed when an Army chaplain boarded our bus full of wounded troops, and began to ask if we were Reserve or active duty," he said. "If it was Guard or Reserve he passed them up, and if it was an active-duty member he began to talk with them."

"He said we would receive the care we needed when we got to the destination station, but he was there for the active-duty guys."

Army Surgeon General LT. Gen. Joseph Webb said of the 21,000 Army guardsmen and reservists injured in the war on terror, nearly 16,000 have finished their rehabilitation and nearly 10,000 have been returned to duty.

"I don't think there's another system in the world that could do that," he said. "But improvements to the seamless transition of care are still needed."

The hearing also covered health care problems not related to duty status. Senior Airman Anthony Pizzifredi, who lost his left leg to a land mine in Iraq, said some medical centers visited knew little about prosthetics and other treatment for amputees.

Keeton said just days after the rocket attack that injured him, he managed to call his wife and sons to let them know he was recovering. To his dismay, his family had no idea he had been injured.

All of the panelists praised the medical community. They called the doctors and medical experts who treated them heroes. But they said that administrative changes need to be made to ensure the wounded troops aren't overwhelmed by bureaucratic mistakes.

Representatives from all four services told the congressional panel that they are committed to providing needed medical care to every soldier returning from combat overseas.

The hearing was solely to gather information; no action was prescribed by the committee.

Army and Army Reserve miss February recruitment goal

BY LISA BURGESS
Stars and Stripes

ARLINGTON, Va. — For the first time in almost five years, the active-duty Army missed its monthly recruiting goal in February, a failure directly related to public concerns about the ongoing wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, an Army recruiting official said.

The Army Reserve also missed its goals in February, for the second month in a row.

"People are watching the news," said Doug Smith, a spokesman for U.S. Army Recruiting Command at Fort Knox in Kentucky. "They know the risks of military service in today's environment."

Army recruiters were told to bring 7,050 new soldiers into the fold in February.

Instead, the recruiters found only 5,114 people willing to join the active Army.

In the Army Reserve, the recruiting goal for the month was 1,320, but only 990 new reservists joined the service.

January's recruiting goal for the Army Reserve was also missed, marking the first monthly shortfall for the component since September 2003, Smith said.

Fort Knox does not keep recruiting statistics for the Army National Guard. Recruiting for the Guard is the responsibility of each state component, which sets its own goal numbers.

Both the Army and Army Reserve, the February shortfalls leave both components short for the fiscal year, as well.

The Army's goal for recruiting active-duty soldiers for fiscal 2005, which began on Oct. 1, is 80,000. By the end of February, the component was supposed to have recruited 27,362 of those soldiers. But the Army missed that goal by 1,823 soldiers.

The goal for the Army Reserve is 22,175. By the end of February, the component was supposed to have recruited 5,587 of those soldiers. But the Army Reserve missed that goal by 642 soldiers.

Although Smith said Army officials are "keeping a close eye" on the recruiting results for the year, he said recruiters still believe they can make up the shortfalls by the end of the fiscal year, Sept. 30.

"Missing a month is not necessarily missing a year," Smith said.

Nevertheless, he said it was going to be a difficult year," Smith said.

For the first time since 2001, the active Army began fiscal 2005 with far fewer recruits in the Delayed Entry Program, which allows newly joined members to wait for up to a year before reporting for boot camp.

Army recruiters predict to begin the fiscal year with 25 to 35 percent of their new yearly goal "banked" under the delayed entry status, Smith said.

But as of Oct. 1, 2004, when the government's fiscal 2005 began, the Army only had 18 percent of its 2005 goal total in the program, he said.

Sgt. James Becker, 27, of Radcliff, Ky., a squad leader for the 127th Military Police Company, center, chats with other members of the unit during a recent stop at the Khadamiyah Police Station in Baghdad. The 127th, which has run daily patrols out of Forward Operating Base Falcon for the last 11 months, is responsible for 19 Iraqi police stations in the city's northwest sector.

FORWARD OPERATING BASE FALCON, Iraq — With about a month left on its yearlong deployment, the 127th Military Police Company knows that now is not the time to lose focus.

Before a recent patrol in northwest Baghdad, Sgt. Ian Parker, 22, of Detroit, warned unit members against complacency.

"The second you're not looking, thinking you can take the Kevlar off or turn your back, that's when something happens," said Parker, a company team leader.

During the last 11 months, the company, which works for the 2nd Brigade Combat Team of the 10th Mountain Division, has endured sniper attacks, ambushes, suicide bombers and bombs hidden along roads or in a vehicle. The unit arrived as the insurgency flared up, at a time when U.S. forces were still combating the country for weapons of mass destruction.

After a decline in violent incidents the past two months, the company has witnessed a recent spike.

"In our sector, violence is a little more active now than it was 11 months ago," said Sgt. James Becker, 27, of Radcliff, Ky., a squad leader. "But it's not something you can dwell on. ... We still have a job to do."

The company patrols day and night, covering an area of northwest Baghdad that includes 19 Iraqi police, patrol and traffic stations. Becker said certain Iraqi communities are now more willing to assist in the search for suspected insurgents.

"When we first got here, we were all pretty edgy because things were heating up," said Pvt. 2nd Class Jeremy Miller, 20, of Staples, Minn., a company gunner. "The gunners were always pointing at vehicles and yelling at everybody to back off. As the year progressed, we've tried more to win over hearts and minds. We're not yelling as much or pointing guns while controlling traffic."

Still, Iraqi motorists once leery of coming within a half-mile of U.S. convoys have recently displayed more bravado, he said.

"They'll sneak up on us now,

trying to test us. I've actually shot at more cars in the last half of the year than the first half," Miller said, referring to the practice of firing warning shots to remind Iraqi drivers to maintain a secure distance.

With that departure date looming next month, the company's hierarchy is preaching diligence and attention to detail.

"It's natural to get complacent toward the end, when you're so close to leaving," Becker said. "Just because nothing's happened in the last few months doesn't mean it won't."

U.S. military says Iraqi cops showing improvement

FORWARD OPERATING BASE FALCON, Iraq — Members of a seasoned U.S. military police company that's monitored the treacherous streets of Northwest Baghdad say they've seen dramatic improvements in the Iraqi police force.

"The Iraqi police are more confident and competent at what they do," said Sgt. James Becker, 27, of Radcliff, Ky., a squad leader in the 127th Military Police Company. "They're actually out there looking for [terrorists], as opposed to when we first got here they were a little clueless. Now, they're much more proactive."

For the past year, the 127th MPs has spent much of its time working with 19 Iraqi police, patrol and traffic stations, said Capt. Kevin Hanrahan, 30, of Whitman, Mass., the 127th MP commander. The military police routinely meet with Iraqi police chiefs, collect statistical data on training programs, deal with contractors and construction projects, and monitor the hunt for terror suspects.

Sgt. Ian Parker, 22, of Detroit, a company team leader, said he's noticed a difference in the attitude of Iraqi forces over the past year.

"When we first got here, they were willing but not really equipped. They didn't have the weapons and training they really needed," he said. "We'd tell them to look into a building and check for insurgents, and they'd be scared. Now, they're a little more secure in their abilities to do the job."

The Iraqis also can effectively set up random checkpoints on their own, "without us having to tell them," Parker added.

After arriving last April, the 127th MPs acted primarily in an observation role while providing security for Iraqi stations, Becker said. Two months into the deployment, they began teaching, training and coaching the Iraqi police on patrols.

"I've seen it come from nothing and start to rebuild itself," Parker said.

"We saw the first free election Iraq has ever had. One of our translators said he almost cried when he voted, said he wanted to weep. That made me proud to be an American."

U.S. deaths over 1,500 in Iraq

Two troops killed in Baghdad; another dies in Babil

BY TODD PITMAN

The Associated Press

BAGHDAD — The number of U.S. troops killed in Iraq has topped 1,500, an Associated Press count showed Thursday after the military announced the deaths of three Americans, while car bombs targeting Iraqi security forces killed at least four people in separate attacks.

Two suicide car bombs exploded outside the Interior Ministry in eastern Baghdad on Thursday, killing at least two policemen and wounding five others, police Maj. Jabar Hassan said. Officials at nearby al-Kindi hospital said 15 people were injured in the blasts, part of the relentless wave of violence since the Jan. 30 elections.

Another car bomb targeting a police convoy exploded in Baghouja, 35 miles northeast of the capital, killing one Iraqi policeman and a civilian, the U.S. military said. Six police and 10 other civilians were also wounded.

Amid the violence, interim Prime Minister Ayad Allawi extended the state of emergency, first announced nearly four months ago, for another 30 days until the end of March. The order remains in effect throughout the country, except in northern Kurdish-run areas.

The emergency decree includes a nighttime curfew and gives the government extra powers to make arrests without warrants and launch police and military operations when it deems necessary.

The latest reported American deaths brought the toll to 1,502, since the United States launched the war in Iraq in March 2003, according to the AP count. The military said two U.S. troops died Wednesday in Baghdad of injuries suffered when a roadside bomb struck their vehicle.

Another soldier was killed the same day in Babil province, part of an area known as the "Triangle of Death" because of the frequency of insurgent attacks on U.S. and Iraqi forces.

The car bombers in Baghdad were trailing a police convoy that was trying to enter the Interior Ministry, Hassan said. Iraqi security forces opened fire on the vehicles and disabled them before they could arrive at a main checkpoint, said Col. Adnan Abdul-Rahman, an Interior Ministry spokesman.

Iraqi forces also killed one Iraqi man during clashes with gunmen in the northern city of Mosul, army Capt. Sabah Yassin said. Two soldiers were injured.

Also in the north, insurgents blew up a gas pipeline that links Kirkuk to Dhihi, about 20 miles away, said Col. Nozad Mohammad, a state oil security official in Kirkuk. Mohammad said the blast would cut gas production, but he could not say by how much.

Talks aimed at forging a new coalition government faltered Wednesday over Kurdish demands for more land and concerns that the dominant Shiite alliance seeks to establish an Islamic state, delaying the planned first meeting of parliament.

Shiite and Kurdish leaders, Iraq's new political powers, failed to reach agreement after two days of negotiations in the northern city of Irbil, with the clergy-backed candidate for prime minister, Ibrahim al-Jaafari, leaving with only half the deal he needed.

The Shiite-led United Iraqi Alliance, which has 140 seats in the 275-member National Assembly, hopes to win backing from the 75 seats held by Kurdish political parties so it can muster the required two-thirds majority to insure control of top posts in the new government.

U.S. deaths in Iraq

The Associated Press

As of Wednesday, at least 1,501 members of the U.S. military have died since the beginning of the Iraq war in March 2003, according to an Associated Press count. At least 1,140 died as a result of hostile action, according to the Defense Department. The figures include four military civilians.

The AP count is nine higher than the Defense Department's tally, last updated at 10 a.m. EST Wednesday.

The British military has reported 86 deaths; Italy, 20; Ukraine, 18; Poland, 17; Spain, 11; Bulgaria, seven; Slovakia, three; Estonia, Thailand and the Netherlands, two each; and Denmark, El Salvador, Hungary, Latvia and Kazakhstan one death each.

Since May 1, 2003, when President Bush declared that major combat operations in Iraq had ended, 1,362 U.S. military members have died, according to AP's count.

The latest deaths reported by the military:

■ A soldier was killed Wednesday in Iraq's Babil province.

The latest identifications reported by the military:

■ Army Spc. Lizabeth Robles, 31, Vega Baja, Puerto Rico; died Tuesday from injuries suffered in a vehicle accident Monday in Beji, Iraq; assigned to the 360th Transportation Company, 68th Corps Support Battalion, 43rd Area Support Group, Fort Carson, Colo.

■ Army Sgt. Julio E. Negron, 28, Pompano Beach, Fla.; died Monday in Beji, Iraq, in a vehicle accident; assigned to the 360th Transportation Company, 68th Corps Support Battalion, 43rd Area Support Group, Fort Carson, Colo.

■ Army Pfc. Danny L. Anderson, 29, Corpus Christi, Texas; died Sunday in Baghdad from small arms fire; assigned to the 26th Forward Support Battalion, 2nd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, Ga.

Trial begins for pedophilia ring in France

BY VERENA VON DERSCHAU

The Associated Press

ANGERS, France — Sixty-six people were accused of participating in a pedophilia ring in which children and babies were prostituted for food and small sums of money Thursday as one of France's biggest trials got under way.

Prosecutors contend that dozens of children — ages 6 months to 14 years — were raped by their parents or offered to other adults for sex from 1999 to 2002.

Some of the 45 victims, who are now in the care of social services, were expected to testify by closed-circuit television. The children will not appear in court.

Authorities were offering psychological counseling to the jurors and six judges to help them cope with sordid testimony of child abuse and gang rape expected during the about four-month trial, to be held in a specially built courtroom in Angers.

Many of the defendants are from low-income households in the working class Saint-Leonard neighborhood of Angers, and some were themselves reportedly abused as children.

Three couples at the center of the prostitution ring lured their children and those of their relatives "to play doctor" with the adults, the newspaper Le Monde reported. One young girl was allegedly raped 45 times.

Defense lawyers planned to argue that government social workers, who were monitoring many of the suspects, failed in their responsibilities or turned a blind eye to signs of abuse. Some of the defendants cited in the 420-page legal filing are illiterate and don't fully understand the charges against them, lawyers said.

Thirty-nine people face up to 30 years in prison if convicted of raping minors under age 15 and on prostitution charges. Other suspects face up to 10 years behind bars if convicted of sexual violence against minors and failure to denounce crimes.

"To my knowledge, we've never seen a criminal case of this magnitude in France," said Pascal Rouiller, a defense lawyer for five suspects. Other people who have participated in the ring while hiding their identities behind masks are believed to still be at large.

"The children speak of one tattooed woman who is not in the defendants' dock," Rouiller said.

Anti-Syrian sentiment on the rise

BY BASSEM MROUE

The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syrian taxi driver Mohammed Taja has been ferrying passengers between Beirut and Damascus for 12 years. But he is reconsidering working here amid the soaring anti-Syrian sentiment that's followed last month's assassination of Lebanon's former prime minister.

Two days after a massive bomb killed Rafik Hariri and 17 others in Beirut, Taja's Dodge — its bright yellow color marking it as a Syrian taxi — was damaged when people on an overpass dropped a motorcycle battery onto it.

And during a recent breakfast, angry young men warned him to leave the neighborhood or his car would be attacked again.

"If things continue this way, I probably will stop coming to Lebanon," said the 38-year-old, standing with fellow Syrian drivers near Charles Helou Station, Beirut's main stop for taxis driving between Lebanon, Syria and Jordan.

Taja is like hundreds of thousands of Syrian workers — mainly farmers and construction workers — lured to Lebanon by the promise of higher pay. But their numbers have noticeably dwindled since some have become targets after Hariri's death, which many Lebanese blame on Syria and their own country's pro-Damascus authorities.

Militant Muslim cleric Abu Bakar Bashir waves from inside a detention truck as he leaves court after his trial in Jakarta, Indonesia, on Thursday. The court sentenced Bashir to 30 months in prison for conspiracy in the 2002 Bali bombings, but cleared him of three more serious charges, including ordering the attack.

Cleric gets 2½ years in Bali bombings

BY CHRIS BRUMMITT

The Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — The alleged leader of a militant Islamic group was sentenced Thursday to 2½ years in prison for conspiracy in the 2002 Bali nightclub bombings that killed 202 people but was cleared of more serious charges. The United States and Australia criticized the sentence.

A five-judge panel cleared Abu Bakar Bashir of allegations that as head of the al-Qaida-linked Jemaah Islamiyah group he planned the 2003 suicide bombing of the J.W. Marriott hotel in Jakarta that killed 12 people and that he incited his followers to launch terrorist attacks.

The 66-year-old preacher could be released from prison by late 2006 with time already served in prison taken into account.

Bashir had faced a maximum penalty of death over the Marriott charge, but most analysts had predicted his punishment would be far less — partly due to a weak case by prosecutors. During the five-month trial, only one witness directly testified that Bashir headed Jemaah Islamiyah, the group blamed in both attacks.

"I'm being oppressed by people from abroad and at home," Bashir said after the verdict, surrounded by hundreds of cheering supporters. "They consider Islamic law to be a shackle and are slaves to immoral behavior. Allah, open their hearts or destroy them."

"Smash America and its lackeys," shouted one supporter.

Both sides said they would consider appealing the verdict, with Bashir's lawyers calling the sentence politically motivated. Bashir and his supporters have repeatedly claimed that Jakarta was under pressure from the United States to find him guilty.

The United States and Australia, which lost seven and 88 citizens respectively in the attack on Bali tourist nightclubs, consider Bashir the spiritual leader of Jemaah Islamiyah and were hoping for a lengthy prison term to deter terrorism in the world's most populous Muslim nation.

Tons of hashish found

THESSALONIKI, Greece — Police seized 4.5 metric tons of hashish after raiding a warehouse in this northern port city, authorities said Thursday.

Three men from Bulgaria were arrested during the raid late Wednesday by police and Finance Ministry fraud officers at the warehouse in the outskirts of Thessaloniki.

U.N. urges nuke talks

VIENNA, Austria — The U.N. atomic watchdog agency urged North Korea on Thursday to return to six-party negotiations over its nuclear program — and to let the agency return to monitoring its atomic activities.

The threat represented by North Korea is "a serious challenge ... to peace and stability in Northeast Asia," and to attempts to control the global spread of nuclear weapons, the board of the 35-nation International Atomic Energy Agency said in a statement Thursday.

In a separate attempt to defuse the North Korean threat, top U.S. and Chinese officials agreed Thursday in Seoul on tactics meant to lure Pyongyang back to multiparty talks on nuclear disarmament.

Abortion amendment

UNITED NATIONS — The United States hinted strongly that it will drop controversial amendments regarding abortion from the final declaration of a high-level U.N. meeting to advance the fight for women's equality.

The U.S. government has come under intense pressure from the European Union and some countries over its demand to add language to the declaration stating that the landmark platform adopted 10 years ago at the U.N. women's conference in Beijing does not create a "right to abortion."

Fossett sets solo flight record

The Associated Press

SALINA, Kan. — Millionaire adventurer Steve Fossett on Thursday became the first person to fly around the world solo without stopping or refueling — 67 hours and 23,000 miles after taking off in his spin-dy-like, experimental jet.

"That was something I wanted to do for a long time, a major ambition," a jubilant Fossett said immediately after emerging from the custom-built GlobalFlyer.

An equally happy Sir Richard Branson, the Virgin Atlantic founder who financed the flight, grabbed a bottle of champagne from Fossett, shook it up, and sprayed down his pilot and longtime friend. Fossett then guzzled from the bottle in celebration.

Fossett, 60, already holds the record for flying solo around the globe in a balloon. He failed five times before successfully completing that flight, but needed just one try to make the trip in a plane. This latest adventure gives Fossett yet another aviation record, adding to the many he holds as a balloonist, pilot and sailor.

But there was some doubt if Fossett would make it back to Salina. Fuel sensors in the custom-built plane's 13 tanks differed from readings of how quickly its single jet engine was burning fuel, forcing Fossett's crew to assume that 2,600 of the original 18,000 pounds of fuel "disappeared."

It was not clear whether there was an actual leak or just a problem with the sensors, Fossett's team said.

Facing a decision near Hawaii about whether to land or press ahead over the vast Pacific Ocean for the U.S. mainland, Fossett told his team, "Let's go for it." Hours later, pushed by strong tail winds that left him with enough in the tanks to finish the global trek, he safely crossed over Los Angeles and turned northeast for Salina and the finish line.

He touched down in Salina at 1:48 p.m. Fossett chose Salina because he needed a long runway for the takeoff and landing. The runway in Salina — once used to train WWII bomber crews — is about 12,000 feet long.

Fossett's GlobalFlyer was designed by the same engineer who came up with the Voyager aircraft that first completed the around-the-world trip 19 years ago with two pilots aboard.

Fossett, 60, set his ballooning record in 2002, taking off and landing in Australia. The millionaire from Chicago has also swam the English Channel, run the Iditarod dog sled race and driven in the 24 Hours of Le Mans car race.

Aviation pioneer Wiley Post made the first solo around-the-world trip in 1933, taking more than seven days and stopping numerous times. Jeana Yeager and Dick Rutan, brother of GlobalFlyer designer Burt Rutan, made their global flight in 1986.

NYPD knew of sketch

NEW YORK — A drawing of Grand Central Terminal found in the home of a suspect in the Madrid train bombings was "not something that would indicate an immediate threat," Police Commissioner Ray Kelly said.

The crude sketch was "a very basic schematic," and was never deemed cause for alarm, Kelly said on Wednesday in response to a report in the Spanish newspaper El Mundo.

The drawing and other data were on a computer disk seized about two weeks after the train bombings in Madrid that killed 191 people on March 11, 2004, El Mundo reported. Spanish police turned the disk over to U.S. agents from the FBI and CIA in December.

Kelly said the data also was shared with the New York Police Department's counterterrorism division and city transit officials, who concluded the sketch depicted Grand Central.

The material also included photographs, and a drawing of a private building in the city.

Rapist denied parole after victims testify

The Associated Press

SUFFIELD, Connecticut — A parole board Thursday rejected a rapist's bid to be released from prison, sending the former jet-set fugitive who lived in Europe back to prison until 2008.

Alex Kelly, who was charged in 1986 with raping two teenagers while he was a high school wrestling standout, was visibly angry after the ruling and demanded the three-member board, "Why do you come here?"

Board members said they were moved by the pleas of Kelly's two victims, Adrienne Bak and Hilary Buchanan, who sat together and fought back tears as they described Kelly's crimes.

"For 19 years, Adrienne and I have been trying to get justice for the brutal rapes this man committed against us," Buchanan said. "He left such an indelible mark on my soul."

Kelly, now 37, has spent eight years in prison, which his victims noted was slightly less than time he lived in Europe as a fugitive.

"I wish there was some way I could explain how sorry I am for what I have done," Kelly told the board.

"I take full responsibility for the things I have done. I have caused a lot of pain to a lot of people and I am sorry for that."

Just before his trial was to begin in 1987, Kelly fled the country. While in Europe, he spent time skiing and mountain climbing using money authorities say his wealthy parents sent him.

Zippo upset by ban

PITTSBURGH — Zippo Manufacturing Co., which prides itself on its classic brass-and-chrome button lighters, says new air quality security regulations could cut into sales by as much as 30 percent.

The U.S. Transportation Security Administration has announced it will ban butane, electric and absorbed fuel lighters aboard all aircraft and in areas behind airport security gates beginning in April.

Zippo officials will meet with U.S. officials later this month to plead their case. Millions of the metal, rectangular lighters are bought on impulse at duty-free shops and at vacation spots as mementos.

Window washers saved

LOS ANGELES — Two window washers were rescued Thursday through a 10th-floor window after their scaffolding collapsed, leaving them dangling for about 40 minutes off a building in downtown Los Angeles.

Neither was injured in the incident, which was broadcast throughout the United States.

Both workers had been wearing safety harnesses attached to the roof of the 12-story building.

Firefighters broke a window and helped them through it.

Jackson trial video

SANTA MARIA, California — Jurors in the Michael Jackson case got their first look Thursday at the singer's master bedroom suite where he allegedly molested a 13-year-old boy.

The panel was shown videotape of a Nov. 18, 2003, raid of Jackson's Neverland ranch. The video showed shots of his cluttered bedroom, but none of the sexually explicit magazines that Santa Barbara County District Attorney Thomas Sneddon has said were found in the suite.

Greenspan floats idea of national consumption tax

BY JEANNINE AVERSA

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan on Thursday said some form of a consumption tax — such as a national sales tax — could spur greater economic growth, but he cautioned that the government would face significant problems making the transition to such a system.

Switching from an income tax to a consumption tax would generate huge opposition from Democrats, who argue that taxing food and other goods would fall hardest on the poor.

Acknowledging those concerns, Greenspan told the President's Advisory Panel on Federal Tax Reform that policy-makers might want to consider a combination of an income tax and a consumption tax.

"I would suspect that probably that may be the best route to go. In other words, don't try for purity," Greenspan said in response to a question from a panelist. "I would suspect that the opposition that would arise would probably make such a structure [a pure consumption tax] infeasible."

Addressing concerns about increased taxes on food and other necessities, Greenspan said that policy-makers could design a consumption tax that would exclude products mostly consumed by the poor.

In his prepared remarks to the panel, the Fed chief said that a consumption tax would be best from the perspective of promoting economic growth "because it would encourage saving and the capital formation that the economy needs to expand and modernize."

"However, getting from the current tax system to a consumption tax raises a challenging set of transition issues," he added.

Greenspan also said he supported tax incentives to encourage savings, despite what he called conflicting evidence about the incentives' success at increasing the national savings rate, because they enhance individuals' retirement accounts.

"And that, especially in the context of the discussions we've all been having the last couple weeks relevant to retirement funding and the like, is clearly something which is desirable," he said.

The Fed chief delivered his assessment to the panel a day after worrying aloud before a House committee about the buildup of budget deficits in recent years. The tax-reform panel is looking into ways to revamp the complex tax code, an important goal of President Bush.

Workload amazes CIA head

The Associated Press

SIMI VALLEY, California — In a rare public appearance, CIA Director Porter Goss said he is overwhelmed by the many duties of his job, including devoting five hours out of every day to prepare for and deliver intelligence briefings to President Bush.

"The jobs I'm being asked to do, the five hats that I wear, are too much for this mortal," Goss said. "I'm a little amazed at the workload."

Goss praised Bush's choice for the new job of national intelligence director, John Negroponte. The career diplomat, who is expected to be confirmed by the Senate, will take over several of the duties currently assigned to Goss, including the presidential briefing.

Goss, who has made few public comments beyond congressional testimony, also said the legislation creating the position of director of national intelligence left him unclear on his future role.

"It's got a huge amount of ambiguity in it," he said. "I don't know by law what my direct relationship is with John Negroponte." Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld or other top officials involved with intelligence.

Mary Beth Brindley, left, and Evelyn Hall, who have been together for 45 years and were married on March 4, 2004, mark their first anniversary at home in Portland, Ore.

At first anniversary, gays have no regrets

Despite backlash, legally hazy marriage is a leap forward, say same-sex couples

BY RUKMINI CALLIMACHI

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Every morning before she headed out into the world, Evelyn Hall took off her gold rings and placed it on the kitchen counter. When she returned at night, she slipped it back on.

Last year, she put it on for good when she married the woman whom relatives had assumed was her roommate, cracking open the secret life she had hidden for 46 years.

A total of 2,968 couples wed in Oregon when the state's most populous county began issuing same-sex marriage licenses a year ago Thursday. Every one of those marriages is now in legal limbo — but gay couples say their legally hazy unions are nonetheless a giant leap forward.

"It was like an out-of-slavery experience. I know it sounds crazy, but we were so closeted," said Mary Beth Brindley, 65, who ran away from home to be with Hall, now 66, when she was 19. "It's a total relief not to have to lie anymore."

Gay weddings swept the country from coast to coast starting in San Francisco on Feb. 12, 2004, when Mayor Gavin Newsom flung open the city's wedding registry to gay couples.

The movement jumped to Oregon in March, then New Mexico and New Paltz, N.Y. By May, thousands of gay couples were on their way to tying the knot in Massachusetts following a ruling by the state's highest court.

Then the backlash set in. Last November, voters in Oregon and 10 other states passed ballot measures banning gay marriage. Voters in two other states, Missouri and Louisiana, banned gay marriages in 2004.

In Oregon and in California, lawsuits are wending their way through the state's legal machinery to determine the legal status of some 7,000 certificates issued to gay couples in the two states.

And while an effort to pass a federal ban on gay marriage failed in the Senate last year, supporters say they will try again in the next Congress.

Gay advocates contend time is on their side.

"It's a case of two steps forward for every one step back, which means we're still one step ahead," said Rebekah Kassel, spokeswoman for Basic Rights Oregon, the state's leading gay rights group.

Rep. Fowler, leader on U.S. defense, dead at 62

BY RON WORD

The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Former U.S. Rep. Tillie Fowler, who became prominent on defense issues during her four terms in Congress, died Wednesday, two days after suffering a brain hemorrhage. She was 62.

Fowler, who was known as the "Steel Magnolia" for her quiet tenacity in Congress, died at a hospital, said Tom Alexander, a family spokesman.

Gov. Jeb Bush called Fowler "a great Floridian and committed public servant. Congresswoman Fowler was a great leader and was dedicated to making the lives of Floridians better. She will be missed."

Fowler was elected to the House of Representatives in 1992, campaigning on an "eight is enough" term-limits pledge.

"Tillie will be remembered as an effective legislator because she always kept her word to her colleagues and constituents," House Speaker Dennis Hastert said.

After leaving Congress in January 2001, she was mentioned as a possible secretary of the Navy in the Bush administration, but instead joined the national law firm of Holland & Knight.

Since 2003, Fowler was chairwoman of the Defense Policy Board Advisory Committee, which advises Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld. She also headed the committee that investigated alleged sexual assaults at the U.S. Air Force Academy and served on the committee that investigated prisoner abuse in Iraq.

A native of Milledgeville, Ga., she was the daughter of former Georgia state Sen. Culver Kidd.

High court rules ex-spies cannot sue CIA

WASHINGTON — A former Cold War spy couple who defected to the United States lost their bid to sue the CIA on Wednesday in a Supreme Court case in which they contended the agency reneged on a pledge of lifetime support.

The possibility that an espionage relationship might be revealed if a lawsuit proceeded was unacceptable, Chief Justice William Rehnquist said in a unanimous decision.

Former spies cannot sue to enforce their contracts, the court concluded, because of the secret nature of their agreements.

The justices relied on a 19th-century Supreme Court ruling which forbade a lawsuit by a Civil War spy who allegedly entered into a contract with President Lincoln to work behind Confederate lines.

States keep lid on mad cow probes

BY JON SARCHÉ

The Associated Press

DENVER, Colo. — When rumor hit the commodities trading floor in Chicago three years ago that Kansas cattle had contracted foot-and-mouth disease, prices plummeted.

A rumor that lasted only a day cost the beef industry an estimated $50 million and forced agriculture officials to spend weeks assuring consumers that the food supply was safe.

With this case and others like it in mind, lawmakers across the country are working on ways to keep livestock disease investigations secret until absolutely necessary. Proposals already have passed in Idaho and Wyoming, while lawmakers in Colorado, Maryland and Utah are considering bills this spring.

In Wyoming, false reporting of an animal disease outbreak is a crime. "There's just no reason to get consumers riled up about something that didn't happen," said Mel Coleman Jr., whose family founded Coleman Animal Products Inc., which sells beef from ranches in Colorado and 12 other states.

Ben Halloran, director of Consumers Union's Consumer Policy Institute in Yonkers, New York, said there are good reasons to fully disclose all information about testing for animal diseases — especially mad cow, the common name for bovine spongiform encephalopathy, or BSE.

A polled Hereford bull peers over the fence in the yards at the National Western Stock Show and Rodeo in Denver. When rumor of a foot-and-mouth disease outbreak among Kansas cattle hit the commodities trading floor in Chicago three years ago, prices plummeted.

Humans who eat BSE-contaminated tissue can contract a degenerative, fatal brain disorder called variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease.

"In a disease as serious as this, we have to have complete openness and transparency," she said.

However, Halloran also said keeping information secret until confirmation of an infection is an understandable step to protect the industry. That is somewhat more restrictive than how the U.S. Agriculture Department has handled public disclosure.

In December 2003, a few weeks after a Holstein in Washington state was screened for mad cow disease, the government said the animal had tested "presumptive positive." The government said a few days later the results had been confirmed in independent testing.

No more cases of the disease have been confirmed in the United States, though the government announced three times last year its preliminary rapid-test procedures had provided inconclusive results. That brought harsh criticism from some ranchers.

Cosby opens up to tabloid

BY NICOLE WEISSENEE EGAN

PHILADELPHIA — Bill Cosby has finally broken his silence about druging and groping allegations leveled against him by a former Temple University employee.

And he did it in an exclusive interview with the National Enquirer, offering a vague, sort-of apology to the 31-year-old Canadian woman.

"Looking back on it, I realize that words and actions can be misinterpreted by another person, and unless you're a supreme being, you can't predict what another individual will do," Cosby said in an interview with Enquirer Editor Barry Levine, in the March 14 issue, which hits newsstands on Friday.

While Cosby at first said he did not want to speculate whether the woman's motive was financial gain — "I don't going to go there" — he all but went there, anyway.

"I am not going to give in to people who try to exploit me because of my celebrity status," said

Cosby, 67, who did not deny that he had been the woman's mentor. "Sometimes you try to help people and it backfires on you and then they try to take advantage of you," Cosby said.

Cosby

"People can soil you by taking advantage."

Although Cosby has been cleared of any criminal charges, he said he was speaking out in anticipation of a civil suit the Canadian woman is expected to file against him shortly.

Cosby also commented on Tamara Green, a 57-year-old California lawyer who said Cosby had drugged and groped her more than 30 years ago. She told her story first to the Philadelphia Daily News.

"My problem is with some media and how it appeared that Miss Green was allowed to be a "wrecking ball," he told the Enquirer, admitting that her allegations intensified the scandal.

David Brokaw, Cosby's publicist, confirmed that Cosby's interview was legitimate.

Dolores Troland and Bebe Kivitz, the Canadian woman's attorneys, issued a brief statement.

"We are pleased that after Mr. Cosby's camp initially characterized our client's allegations as bizarre and utterly preposterous, he has acknowledged that it was his conduct after all that formed the basis for her allegations," they said.

Cosby's decision to speak to the supermarket tabloid, with which he has had a contentious relationship over the years, was unusual for a number of reasons. Five years ago, he threatened a $250 million lawsuit against the Enquirer and demanded a retraction of a story that claimed a then-20-year-old actress had accused him of sexual misconduct. Stuart Zakim, a spokesman for the Enquirer, declined to comment on whether Cosby had filed suit or whether the tabloid had retracted its story.

Baseball great gets posthumous honor from lawmakers

BY ERICA WERNER
The Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — More than a half-century after breaking sport's color barrier, Jackie Robinson was posthumously awarded Congress' highest honor, a Congressional Gold Medal.

President Bush gave the medal to Robinson's widow, Rachel Robinson, on Wednesday in a state ceremony in the Capitol Rotunda. The Democratic and Republican leaders of the House and Senate and baseball commissioner Bud Selig looked on. "His story is one that shows what one person can do to hold America to account to its founding promise of freedom and equality," Bush said. "It's a lesson for people coming up to see."

"One person can make a big difference in setting the tone of this country."

When Robinson joined the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947, he was the first black player on a major league team. He died in 1972 and his No. 42 was retired throughout baseball in 1977.

"This medal confirms what we know," Rachel Robinson said.

"Jackie Robinson stands as a heroic role model for all Americans who believe in justice and equality."

Speakers extolled Robinson as a courageous athlete who suffered taunts and slurs from fans and fellow players, ignoring them as he proved both a brilliant ballplayer and a civil rights hero. The latter role wasn't one he sought but it became inevitable after Dodgers owner Branch Rickey bucked much of popular opinion and signed him.

"He knew he was a symbol and a barrier-breaker, and that staying the course would have consequences for millions of people to come," Rep. Mel Watt, D-N.C., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, said.

Robinson stayed the course, and excelled. He was rookie of the year in 1947, and was voted the league's Most Valuable Player in 1949 when he batted .342 and drove in 124 runs. He played 10 seasons with the Brooklyn Dodgers, often at second base.

He was elected to baseball's Hall of Fame in 1962.

Speakers at Wednesday's ceremony recalled hearing of Robinson's exploits or watching him play in their youth, proving once again that whatever ideological differences divide them, America's pastime rarely fails to unite the country's political leaders.

Bush said he had hoped for a Robinson baseball card as a kid, even though he rooted for the Giants. House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., recalled going to a Cubs game with his grandfather, and being told the Dodgers were playing and he would see history being made.

Robinson is only the second major league player to ever get the Congressional Gold Medal — the first was Roberto Clemente in 1973.

Jackie Robinson was No. 1 for Topps in 1953. He was the first black player on a major league baseball team and was elected to baseball's Hall of Fame in 1962.

Ray Charles tapes seized from engineer

BY GEOFF BOUCHER
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — A recording engineer who worked for Ray Charles for two decades and who won four Grammys last month for his work on the late singer's final album was arrested four days later after police pried open the door of his Burbank loft and found 300 original master recordings that belonged to Charles.

Terry Howard, 48, was in custody Wednesday after his arrest Feb. 17, but his attorney, Steve Crom, said they would post bail Thursday.

A judge reduced it to $1 million to $100,000 this week.

"These are recordings that he contractually and legally had every right to have in his possession," Crom said. A recording engineer, he said, often works at home.

Los Angeles Police Detective Donald O. Hryciak said the stacks of music included old reel-to-reel recordings of Charles and other artists whose work was stored in the singer's library.

Jerry Digney, Charles' former publicist and spokesman for his estate, said in a statement: "Whatever the outcome, Ray Charles Enterprises puts a high value on its assets, especially its master tapes, and will do its utmost to ensure their safety and proper handling along with protecting other irreplaceable valuables belonging to the late entertainer and to his estate."

Perpetuating the stigma

The shootings at Fort Bragg, N.C., in early February are a reminder of the four wives who were killed by their husbands at Fort Bragg in 2002, three of those four husbands having recently returned from Afghanistan.

Part of the Pentagon's plan to prevent domestic violence upon the return of divisions from Iraq and Afghanistan is to reduce the stigma of mental health care for troops needing and seeking it ("Overcoming stigma, dealing with trauma," article, Feb. 5).

Col. Thomas Burke, one of the Pentagon's top psychologists, says, "There is a perception among the troops that seeking mental health care means you're weak or a coward and frankly, we in the military kind of foster that attitude."

Certainly, Lt. Gen. James Mattis has perpetuated that stigma when he told a group in San Diego recently that "it's quite fun to fight 'em, you know. It's a hell of a boot. It's fun to shoot some people."

If a three-star general has no compunction about expressing his cavalier attitude toward war in a public forum, what are the chances subordinates in need of mental health care will seek it upon their return from a war zone?

Our Pentagon appears to be functioning at cross-purposes.

Baumhoder holds heroes near, dear

BY CORA A. METZ

Recently, I visited Baumhoder, Germany, respectfully nicknamed "The Rock" and home of the 1st Armored Division. On the two-lane highway leading there, I noticed an odd sign posted on the guardrail to my right. The sign read, "Getting warmer." Puzzled, I had no clue as to what those words meant until I saw another sign a short distance ahead. In the middle of a field, a large white cloth draped over a rolled ball of what I read, "Welcome home, SSG Santiago."

The two signs were only small indicators of what lay ahead.

Approaching the gate, I admired more homemade signs, particularly the patriotic ones in red, white and blue paint, that welcomed home the battle-weary troops who had recently returned from Iraq. Once on foot, I marveled at sturdy trees standing at attention, proudly boasting yellow ribbons and bows fastened sporadically around their trunks. Various-sized yellow bows as far as my eyes could see were tacked to just about every visible nook and cranny. Several fences and sides of buildings held more hand-painted signs, which the troops could not possibly have missed as they rolled in that day. I was proud of that.

Wanting to do a little shopping, I stood in a long line leading to the ATM near the PX. In line ahead of me stood two soldiers in BDUs and three in civvies. I could tell the ones in civvies were soldiers too as I unintentionally overheard bits and pieces of their conversations about being back home, the things they had done or planned to do. These young soldiers, looking barely out of their teens, bore skin with deep tans as if they had spent too much time lazing in the sun on some beautiful tropical beach. However, Iraq was no day at anyone's beach. I felt sad about that.

As I neared the ATM, the post speakers came to life with the familiar crisp bugle notes, which signaled retreat to lower the flag and end the duty day. Seemingly, a special reverent hush fell over the area, proof that this traditional ceremony had taken on a new meaning, especially these young men. Those in line ahead of me snapped around sharply to face the source of the music. I turned too and a panoramic view of the parking lot revealed even more patriotism. Soldiers in either BDUs or desert cammies readied themselves to pay their respect to our flag.

On the road in front of the PX, a few cars had stopped; their drivers had stepped out onto the street ready to do the right thing to the flag too. Nearby, I noticed a young toddler of about 2 standing next to her dad in uniform, proudly looking up at him and probably wondering what she should do. She connected her tiny fingers with his left hand and stared straight ahead, just as her dad did as he prepared to salute with his right hand. That touched me.

As the bugle continued with the second part and the color guard slowly lowered the flag, everyone that I could see stood still, some with a salute, others with their hands over their hearts, honoring the flag as it descended into the soldiers' waiting hands. When retreat ended, drivers stepped back in their cars and awakened their engines to continue their journeys. The soldiers and others resumed their pace through the parking lot to their intended destinations.

Finished with my shopping, I headed home but, at the last minute, decided to drive down the street near the theater to view more of what welcomed the soldiers on the day they returned.

The fence surrounding the track behind the theater held even more signs. "We love you, 1-6 INF"; "You are our heroes, 2-6 INF"; "Welcome home, 1-45"; and so on. More yellow bows and ribbons on a chain-link fence filled spaces between the signs.

Near the fence stood a group of fresh-faced young men that I could mistake as "Iraqi" tan. As I slowly drove by, I noticed that they were laughing and talking among themselves. One quickly puffed repeatedly and nervously on a cigarette. Others ers punctuated their conversations with animated hand gestures and brotherly hugs. Even from my car, I sensed their lingering uneasiness, yet they seemed relieved to be back on "The Rock." "I was happy for them too."

As I turned toward the traffic circle to head off post, I saw a lone soldier jogging in his gray and black PT uniform. As he approached the crosswalk ahead of me, I stopped to let him pass so that he would not break his stride. That is when it all came together for me. My heart filled with both pride and sorrow.

I felt profoundly proud of these soldiers who served so bravely and had returned safely to enjoy this extremely well-deserved heroes' welcome home. A deep sadness overwhelmed me as my thoughts turned to the soldiers who never made it back.

With my heart full, I cried as I drove away. So I say to each of you on "The Rock" and to all our soldiers who have returned safely: I salute you for a superb job extremely well done.

Initiative needs more than show of good faith

Chicago Tribune

As far back as his 2000 campaign, President Bush made government partnerships with religious organizations a centerpiece of his "compassionate conservative" approach to social welfare programs.

The idea of faith-based initiatives has a lot of appeal, as long as public funds aren't used for religious proselytizing. It is an opportunity to put work in the hands of local people who know their communities best.

The White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives boasts that hundreds of millions of dollars are flowing to religiously affiliated organizations that provide food banks, drug treatment, job training, homeless shelters, counseling centers, after-school programs for children and other services.

But some questions have been raised about how committed the administration really is to this. Two former top officials of the office say the efforts have been far less than promised.

David Kuo, who resigned as deputy director of the office in December 2003, says that the administration regarded great political benefits from a "minimal" commitment to the faith-based agenda and provided no more than "a whisper of what was promised" by Bush.

The administration promised to seek $6.8 billion for the efforts in his first term, but the programs have received only $500 million, Kuo said in an essay on Bellefleur, an independent Web site for discussion of religious issues.

That's not entirely Bush's fault. Congress balked at the president's proposed "charitable choice" tax incentive, which would have provided a tax break for charitable contributions made by people who don't itemize their federal tax deductions. That worthy idea might have unleashed billions of dollars in new donations to worthy programs. "Republicans were indifferent to the poor and the Democrats were allergic to faith," Kuo wrote. He blamed the White House for failing to bring political pressure to pass the tax measure. "From tax cuts to Medicare, the White House gets what the White House really wants," he wrote. "It never really wanted the poor people stuff."

Kuo's criticism echoes comments made by John J. Dillilo Jr., who resigned in 2001 after only seven months as the first director of the office of faith-based initiatives. A year after his departure, Dillilo charged in an interview with Esquire that "Mayberry Machiavellians" in the White House put politics ahead of the office's compassionate service mission.

It seems that Bush did back away from the "charitable choice" effort in 2001, say-cut legislation and enacted some scaled-down faith-based initiatives on his own. Little effort has been made to revive the tax proposal. Funding for the office of faith-based initiatives has been flat, Kuo pointed out, while other domestic priorities have been given increases.

Responding to Kuo's comments, a White House spokesman said that Bush remains committed to push faith-based initiatives in the second term.

Presidents have to make choices, and there's no doubt that Bush's efforts to provide federal support to religious organizations met considerable resistance in Congress from the get-go. It remains, though, an intriguing and worthwhile idea. Perhaps in a second term, the White House can demonstrate some success in the early, limited efforts of the office of faith-based initiatives, to build more support in Congress.

Thousands of local social service programs are getting a welcome federal boost that they might otherwise not have received.

Community-based programs, armed and energized by their personal attachment to their neighborhoods, tend to do a better and more efficient job than government does of understanding and meeting the needs of the people they serve.

The president's open and honest discussion of faith, and his efforts to support faith-based organizations, undoubtedly contributed to a noticeable improvement in his support from those who attend church services regularly, including black and Latino voters. He showed that it's good policy and good politics.

Faith-based programs should be given a chance to show how much good work they can do. Washington should try to help them do it, instead of standing in the way.

With longer deployments, military path a harder sell

BY JULES WITCOVER
Tribune Media Services

WASHINGTON
In documentary filmmaker Michael Moore's controversial "Fahrenheit 9/11" last year, one of the most telling movie scenes showed Marine Corps recruiters trying to persuade unemployed young men in Moore's hometown of Flint, Mich., to sign up, with little success.

Just the other night, on the BBC World nightly television newscast, the scene was repeated by National Guard recruiters seeking to get young African-American men in Alabama to do the same, with similar results. One of the young men said flat-out that he wanted no part of an enlistment that might put him in Iraq to get shot at and maybe killed.

A common reaction these days, as military recruiters are hard-pressed to find youths willing to sign on the dotted line, even with the enticement of bonuses that run as high as $15,000 for new recruits and $35,000 for re-enlistment of combat veterans of Iraq and Afghanistan.

The Marines have been particularly hard hit, having failed to miss their monthly recruiting quota for the first time in nearly 10 years.

One reason may be, as reported in The New York Times, that the Marine Corps, which constitutes 21 percent of the 150,000 American forces in Iraq, has sustained 31 percent of the U.S. fatalities, as of last Friday standing at 1,480.

The Marines are also suffering a higher rate of suicides — a 29 percent increase last year, according to the Marine Corps commandant, Gen. Michael W. Hagee. All of the 31 Marine suicides were committed by enlisted men, most of them not older than 25, and another 83 attempted suicide, according to The Washington Post.

Hagee indicated at a breakfast meeting with reporters the other day that while most of the suicides were not by Marines who had served in Iraq, the great stresses of deployments resulting from manpower demands of the war and other U.S. global obligations had taken their toll.

The Marine recruiting experience is being duplicated by the Army and National Guard units in the States, which have also seen a sharp drop-off in recruitment. The Army, which last year had more than 5,200 recruiters seeking enlistees, has added 800 more to drum up new soldiers.

Another major factor in the difficulty of keeping the volunteer Army and particularly the National Guard up to strength has been the uncertainty of tours of duty, as shortages of certain skilled soldiers and interests of maintaining unit cohesion have produced extensions of service and in overseas assignments.

The disruptions of family life among National Guardsmen who did not anticipate long overseas separations, let alone facing combat, have generated much apprehension and complaining among family members left behind, as well as from the soldiers themselves.

LT. Gen. H. Steven Blum, chief of the National Guard Bureau, told the House Armed Services Committee last month that the Guard was "woefully under-equipped before the war started" and is supplying more than 40 percent of the combat forces in Iraq. Recruitment had fallen to 30 percent of its goals, requiring a large boost in bonuses.

As a result of the manpower demands of the Iraq war, the Guard has moved a great distance from its former role as a home-defense force often called out to deal with domestic disasters from floods to earthquakes and only occasional tasks of coping with street unrest and riots.

During the Vietnam War, the Guard had few enlistment problems, as young Americans facing the draft vied for available slots as a haven against possible service under fire in Southeast Asia. That clearly is not the case today, when chances of overseas deployment are high and extensions of tours, labeled by critics as a "backdoor draft," have made recruitment a major Pentagon headache.

As the American engagement in Iraq approaches its third year in three weeks, with no projections from the administration about when it will end, the U.S. armed forces are in an uncommon state of disarray.

And those determined military fishers of men dispatched to the nation's working-class neighborhoods are finding it ever harder to bring in an adequate catch.

Bizarre goat trade

PA MOUNT PLEASANT — Four men stole, killed and butchered a goat so they could trade its meat for crack cocaine, police said.

Authorities charged the four men with theft, receiving stolen property, cruelty to animals, and criminal conspiracy on Tuesday for the Dec. 24 incident in Bullsinn Township, about 35 miles southeast of Pittsburgh.

James Walter Albright, 37, dragged the 4-year-old pygmy goat from its pen with a rope and tied the animal to a shrub, where he and Charles W. Smith Jr., 20, killed the animal by beating its head with a hammer or a steel pipe, police said.

The men then took the goat to Smith's residence, where his father, Charles W. Smith, 48, and Gilbert Wesley Fisch, 38, skinned the animal and cut it up, police said.

8 years for fatal crash

HI HONOLULU — A highway racer who caused a fatal traffic accident was sentenced in Circuit Court to eight years in prison.

Nicholas Tudisco, 21, pleaded no contest in November to manslaughter for the death of Elizabeth Kekoa, 58, a teacher at Holy Trinity School.

Tudisco had admitted he was going more than 100 miles per hour in the H-1 freeway in August 2001 when his car crashed into Kekoa's van.

Kekoa's husband, Wally, who was driving the van, and her mother, Rose Davis, were also injured in the crash. Tudisco was not hurt.

Home had border tunnel

CA SAN DIEGO — U.S. and Mexican authorities investigating a cross-border tunnel found the entrance in a middle-class residence in Mexicali, Mexico, and believe the passage ends about 100 yards north in a residential area of Calexico.

It was the third tunnel discovered in the area in 15 months. Authorities suspect the tunnel was used to ferry drugs across the border.

The 3-by-5-foot passage, which started in a back bedroom of the Mexicali home, is equipped with ventilation and lighting systems, and lined with wood beams for support. Outside the entrance, a closed-circuit camera system provided security, Mexican authorities said.

The residence was found abandoned, and no arrests have been made.

Limits on beach surreys

VA VIRGINIA BEACH — The city is considering limits on the gawky, pedal-powered surreys that tourists ply along the resort's beach front.

The four-wheel tourist-mobility has grown from 10 in 1998 to more than 170 today. There are about 28 rental establishments in the resort. City officials want to limit the number of surreys to five per operator, for a total of 140, and charge a $100 annual fee for each surrey.

For police, it's a matter of public safety.

Loaded with four to six adults, surreys can easily top 1,000 pounds. "They can get a lot of mo-

"We're seeing enough minor incidents that we want to get some intervention before something major happens."

Toddler missing in river

TX EAGLE PASS — Authorities on both sides of the border were trying to find a 20-month-old boy who fell into the Rio Grande while being carried across the river from Mexico.

The toddler and his mother were part of a group of six undocumented immigrants crossing the river near Eagle Pass. Border Patrol agents heard the woman's cries.

"Her 1½-year-old boy had slipped into the current as they crossed. Someone was carrying him, and the current was too much. He lost his grip on the child," said Dennis Smith, a Border Patrol spokesman.

U.S. agents have been searching by ground and air, along with Mexican emergency crews.

Pharmacist's refusal

WI MADISON — A Roman Catholic pharmacist who blocked a woman's attempt to fill a prescription for birth control pills should be reprimanded and required to attend ethics classes, a judge ruled.

Administrative Law Judge Colleen Baird recommended the punishment for Neil Nosen of St. Paul, Minn., who said it would be a sin under his religion to provide a contraceptive.

the woman's prescription himself or transfer it to another pharmacy.

Krystal Williams-Oby, said Wisconsin law does not address the issue, nor do state rules established by the Pharmacy Examining Board.

Baird noted that state rules prohibit pharmacists from engaging in practices that could be a "danger to the health, welfare or safety of a patient or public." Baird found Nosen put the woman at risk of an unwanted pregnancy through his actions.

The judge's recommendation goes to the pharmacy board.

Settlement in mice suit

MD BALTIMORE — An Indiana company has agreed to pay $7.2 million to settle all claims it supplied researchers on aging with genetically modified mice that did not have the traits promised.

Federal prosecutors said Tuesday that Harlan, Sprague, Dawley Inc. of Indianapolis supplied the mice under contract to the National Institute of Aging, based in Bethesda, Md.

The exact nature of the research and the specific traits that the laboratory mice were supposed to have were not disclosed.

Sign-wearing sentence

FL ORLANDO — If drivers can't read Erik Rivera's sign, they might be going too fast.

Rivera used to speed and street race on late nights through southern Orange County. Now he goes at a slower pace, wearing a sign: "Don't Street Race. I Lost my Driver's License for 3 Years."

Orange Circuit Judge John H. Adams Sr. ordered 24-year-old Rivera, of Kissimmee, to wear the sandwich-board sign as a deterrent to other racers.

Rivera was arrested in June and convicted in November of fleeing and eluding deputies and resisting law enforcement without violence.

Rivera will wear the 2-foot-by-3-foot sign for 50 consecutive Sundays from 1 a.m. to 2 a.m., when other young people are out racing. He must also pay for the sign and attend a special driving school.

Escapee faces charges

ME LEWISTON — A 17-year-old escapee from the Long Creek Youth Development Center faces a charge of attempted murder in the weekend shooting of a Lewiston man through the window of his first-floor apartment, police said.

The shooting victim, Tyler Morin, 19, was listed in stable condition at Central Maine Medical Center, where he was being treated for gunshot wounds to the chest and shoulder.

Twenty minutes after Morin died 911 early Sunday to report the shooting, a Sagadahoc County sheriff's deputy spotted the suspect in a vehicle in Topsham and pulled it over. The youth fled into a wooded area, said Lewiston Police Sgt. Michael McGonagle.

McGonagle said the boy was eventually returned to the South Portland youth center, from which he had escaped Oct. 30. In addition to attempted murder, he faces charges of burglary of a motor vehicle, eluding police and escape.

Wicked big lobster

Bubba, left, a 23-pound lobster pulled from the waters off Nantucket, Mass., is shown next to an average lobster (1.5 pounds) at Wholey's Fish Market in Pittsburgh. The big crustacean, probably 30 to 50 years old, was to get a landlocked home, but he died in Pittsburgh Zoo's quarantine area. The cause of death was probably stress from the move, officials said.

Burning brightly

A fire in Billings, Mont., is seen from three miles away. An unattended-living facility under construction was destroyed by the fire. Two townhouses were severely damaged. Fire Marshal Frank Oedermann said it will be quite a while before they can determine what caused the blaze.

The reptile, an unlikely visitor to Wyoming, was found near a road by Terri Smith, who was walking her dog. Smith's husband, Ken Smith, brought the tortoise back to their home until Game and Fish could examine it. They told the Smiths it probably was a desert tortoise, native to the Southwest.

No pay, no homework

CA BERKELEY — Students in the Berkeley school district aren't getting written homework assignments because teachers are refusing to grade work on their own time after two years without a pay raise.

"Teachers do a lot with a little. All of a sudden, a lot of things that they do are just gone. It's demoralizing," said Rachel Baker, who has a son in kindergarten.

The action was organized by the Berkeley Federation of Teachers, which wants a cost-of-living increase next year.

District Superintendent Michele Lawrence expressed sympathy for the teachers but said there isn't money for raises. She blamed Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger not providing as much money to education as promised.

Chicken fights busted up

GA CLARKESVILLE — Authorities arrested 33 people after busting a chicken fight.

The Habersham County sheriff's office received an anonymous tip about a fight, and officers arrived about 100 people fled the venue, described by Sheriff DeRay Fincher as a "full-fledged operation," where bleachers were set up and organizers were charging admission.

The Department of Agriculture and the Department of Natural Resources took custody of the chickens after no one stepped forward to claim the live animals, which had to be separated to prevent them from fighting.

Hypnotist accused

CT MILFORD — A British hypnotist charged with having sex with patients under his spell and secretly videotaping the encounters was sentenced Monday to 90 days in prison and fines possible deportation to England.

Michael Johnstone, 64, had pleaded no contest to reckless endangerment and breach of peace. As part of a plea deal, he received three years in prison with all but 90 days suspended. He will not have to register as a sex offender or attend sex therapy.

Authorities said Johnstone confessed to having sex and videotaping the trysts with a half-dozen patients who came to him for anxiety treatment. The incidents allegedly occurred between 2000 and 2003.

Prosecutors said immigration officials are investigating and may detain Johnstone after his sentence.

Beating by cops alleged

WI MILWAUKEE — Three police officers were charged in the beating of a man outside a house party in what witnesses have called a racially motivated attack.

Witnesses said about 10 people surrounded Frank Jude Jr., beat him and kicked him in the head while holding his arms behind his back when he was face down in the street.

According to claims filed against the city by Jude and others, the white officers — Jon Bartlett, Daniel L. Masarik and Andrew R. Spengler — used racial slurs as they attacked Jude, who is black.

The three officers, who all remain suspended with pay, were released after posting $5,000 bail each.

Search for arsonist

DC WASHINGTON — Investigators on Tuesday upped the ante in their search for a serial arsonist.

They nearly tripled the reward — from $35,000 to $100,000 — for information leading to an arrest and conviction of the person behind more than 40 fires.

The arsonists began March 8, 2003, in the District of Columbia.

Since then, there have also been cases in Prince George's and Montgomery counties in Maryland, and Fairfax County and the city of Alexandria in Virginia. The most recent was Dec. 10 in Northeast Washington.

Forty-five fires and one attempted arson are linked to the suspect. A Northeast Washington fire on June 5, 2003 — one of two that day — killed an elderly woman.

Taser sparks criticism

CA AURORA — Police found themselves in the crosshairs of public criticism after officers used a Taser stun gun to subdue a man accused of pilfering from a salad bar at a Chuck E. Cheese's pizzeria packed with families and young children.

"They beat this man in front of all these kids, then Tased him in my sister's lap," said witness Felicia Mayo, who was at the establishment with her 7-year-old son. "They had no regard for the effect this would have on the kids. This is Chuck E. Cheese, you know."

Police responded to Chuck E. Cheese's after a manager complained that a patron had refused to show proof that he had paid for food.

Church, school vandalism

CA DAVIS — Swastikas, racist graffiti and satanic messages were spray-painted on two schools and a church, stunning members of this liberal college town and sparking a multiracial hate-crimes investigation.

"I'm just so sickened by what's happened," said Mayor Ruth Asmundson.

The vandalism occurred less than two years after the city and its school district held a series of emotional public meetings about hate crimes committed by a few of the city's youths. At the meetings, dozens of students and local residents described acts of bigotry and racism in the community that they believed were being ignored by local officials.

Dolphin release

FL PORT ST. LUCIE — Bashful, Sleepy and Sneezey — three of the 37 rough-toothed dolphins that beached themselves on the Florida coast in August — are heading home.

Officials with Mote Marine Laboratory, where the three dolphins survived hurricanes and the deaths of four pod mates, plan to release the deep-sea animals in the Atlantic Ocean.

The release is the culmination of efforts by scores of veterinarians and volunteers who fought to keep the stranded dolphins alive after they were found in the surf just south of the St. Lucie Nuclear Plant.

Designer gives birth

Designer Stella McCartney and her husband have named their infant son.

McCartney

Miller Alasdair James Willis was born Friday in London, weighing 7 pounds, 7 ounces, to McCartney, the daughter of Paul McCartney, and her husband, Alasdair Willis, People magazine said Tuesday.

Willis, a former magazine publisher, and McCartney, 33, were married in August 2003. It is the couple's first child.

Stamos marriage is over

The marriage between Rebecca Romijn and John Stamos is officially over. Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Harvey A. Silberman signed off on the family law judgment Thursday, nearly a year after the couple announced they were separating after five years of marriage.

The marriage was officially terminated as of Tuesday, according to the document. The couple have no children.

Romijn, 32, is filming "Man About Town" with Ben Affleck. Her screen credits include "Rollerball" and "Femme Fatale." Stamos, 41, started on television's "Full House" from 1987 to 1995. He has a new ABC comedy, "Jake in Progress."

Berry stalker faces court

A judge in Santa Monica, Calif., issued a three-year restraining order against a man who allegedly sent threatening letters to Halle Berry's home.

Superior Court Judge Linda K. Lefkowitz ruled that Robert Sawyer of San Pablo, about 15 miles northeast of San Francisco, was to stay 100 yards away from Berry and to keep the same distance from her home, work and vehicle.

The order, which expires in 2008, also prohibits him from contacting the actress by phone, mail or e-mail.

Berry wasn't in court Monday when the judge made her decision.

Court records filed on Berry's behalf earlier this month claim Sawyer's letters talk about "delusions he has about a purported romantic relationship [with the actress]."

Sawyer was contacted by Berry's personal security in November advising him not to reach the actress anymore. But Sawyer sent more letters to Berry, including one that said he would visit her on Valentine's Day "to fulfill his delusions of a romantic relationship."

Chaka Khan's son charged

The son of R&B singer Chaka Khan surrendered to police after he learned that prosecutors had charged him with murder in the shooting death of a 17-year-old boy, police said.

Damien Patrick Holland, 25, surrendered Monday with his lawyers at his side, according to a printed LAPD statement.

He is being held on $2 million bail.

Prosecutors allege that Holland shot Christopher Bailey of Los Angeles at a September 2004 party as the two struggled for a gun during a fight.

Khan, 51, is known for hits such as "Tell Me Something Good" and "I Feel for You."

More money from 'Rings'

Peter Jackson's production company sued New Line Cinema on claims it has been shortchanged on profits from the first film in the "Lord of the Rings" trilogy.

Wingnut Films alleges in a federal lawsuit filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles that New Line and subsidiary Katja Motion Pictures failed to properly calculate revenue, including revenue from DVD sales, from 2001's "The Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring."

The lawsuit doesn't specify an amount sought in damages but claims the movie grossed more than $314 million in box office receipts in the United States and more than $356 million overseas, plus revenue from video and merchandise sales.

A phone call to a New Line spokesman, wasn't immediately returned late Monday.

Mirah's instant gratification

Singer-songwriter won't let business interfere with creativity

BY DAN DELUCA

Knight Ridder Newspapers

MIRAH YOM YOT Zeitlyn is picking at her granola, talking about what it was like when she started writing songs, and what it's like now.

"You know how little kids, when you watch them, they pick their noses and take off amazing drawings and take off their clothes and pee in their pants and nothing is really that big of a deal?"

Kids are "like amazing complete beings within themselves. But at some point you start to go, 'Oh, you're watching me! Maybe I should stand like this? Or maybe I should do this? And it's awful.'"

The indie singer-songwriter, who performs as Mirah (pronounced MEER-ah), grew up here. On a recent Saturday, back home from Portland, Ore., where she lives, Mirah sat for an interview along with her sister, Emily. Mirah, 30, began writing songs when she was studying at liberal-arts haven Evergreen State College in Olympia, Wash., the town that's home to influential label K Records, which has put out albums by Sleater-Kinney, Beck, and Beat Happening.

Her first album, the low-fi "You Think It's Like This, But Really It's Like This," came out on K in 2000 and it was followed by the stunning "Advisory Committee" in 2001. "Songs From the Black Mountain Music Project" (a collaboration with Ginger Brooks Takahashi), and last year's quietly stirring "C'mon Miracle."

In 2004, she also released "To All We Stretch the Open Arm," a subtle antiwar record, recorded with Portland's Black Cat Orchestra, that mixed originals and Argentinian folk songs with covers of Bob Dylan, Leonard Cohen and Kurt Weill.

She commands a cult audience in this country and abroad. Her songs set her apart from the guitar-strumming pack with telling details in the music and lyrics that can bring the listener up short, such as on the sexually frank "Murphy Bed" or a "You Think," or the near-orchestral epic "Cold, Cold Water," which opened "Advisory Committee" with a flourish.

She sings in a girlish voice that seems utterly guileless, but she says maintaining that childlike quality, and not letting creativity be undermined by self-consciousness, is not as easy as it may sound.

"I think I actually got into making music because it was immediately gratifying," she says. "When I first started writing songs, I couldn't even play the guitar. I could play, like, one string. I wasn't very conscious of what I was doing or what was happening. I was just making music ...

"But the skills you need to write songs and play music don't have anything to do with having a music-theory background or having played since you were a kid. It's just not important. You just start doing it."

The Zeitlyns grew up in an environment conducive to creativity.

Their mother, Elizabeth, is a painter, and father Jay, "has really eclectic musical taste," says Emily, 32. "World music and klezmer and gospel, and all kinds of stuff. He gave me this Nina Simone record when I was 17, which changed my life."

For a time, the family lived in a commune in West Virginia, and the alternative lifestyle rubbed off on the children: Mirah, whose middle name means good day or holiday in Hebrew, went on a peace march in Russia when she was 12, and spent her junior year at Evergreen building houses in Norway and learning to speak Norwegian. Every winter, she works for two months at her brother Dylan's farm, north of Scranton, Pa., harvesting maple syrup.

Phil Elvrum, of the band the Microphones, produces Mirah's albums, in which spacious arrangements are flanked by out-of-the-ordinary instrumental touches, from ukuleles to pump organs to tape loops.

He's enamored of her "powerfully beautiful voice" but says she's also "very good at letting me into her songs. ... She's generous with her personal work," but also sturdy enough to have it still be unquestionably hers when it's done.

Mirah says she has never had an overarching plan for her career, which she says her older brother, who is a singer, older "has me a little concerned. But one of the reasons that I don't have a plan [now] is that I didn't [originally], and things are fine. But at the same time, I think maybe things would be better if I did have a plan."

Mirah, who manages herself, also worries about the distractions of the music business getting in the way of her creativity. To that end, she puts herself in situations that force her to stretch herself creatively.

In 2003, she traveled to Buenos Aires, where she recorded two songs with Kassin that wound up on "C'mon Miracle," and later this year she plans to retreat to a Puget Sound island with Elvrum to write and record.

"The business aspect is very distracting; the state of mind I have to be in is counterproductive to being a creative artist," Mirah says. "It makes me have to think about myself. And I want to be able to do things."

Horoscope

The moon enters Capricorn, stimulating an afternoon business rush. Many work late and take work home to do over the weekend. During the night, Mercury enters Aries, giving a fresh start to intellectual pursuits, especially having to do with communication. Consider taking up a new hobby that helps you express yourself.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY

(March 4). In this empowering year, you take control of your personal life and so feel better about your role in the outside world. Your health and work situation get a boost this month. April brings a cash infusion. Tackle your environment in the summer — improvement projects change your life. New romance is especially exciting with a Libra or Capricorn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You press the "reset" button on your life. Review your past lists, diaries and goals to see if they still apply. Wealth key: You have access to economic and market data — utilize it more often.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Accept that you can't know everything, and even an impressive amount of experience can't insulate you from feeling shaky in an unfamiliar territory. You're disarming when you make a silly mistake. Use it to your advantage.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You are exciting, unpredictable and eccentric. Treat relationships like gold. The temptation is to play games — because you see how gullible others are when it comes to you — but be merciful with a tender heart.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Look beyond the immediate. Greater things await you if you keep your eye on the goal. Someone who has you on a pedestal may finally get a dose of reality — ultimately better for you both.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The little things are a thrill, like a special phone call, a chance to win a car.

test or a compliment heard through the grapevine. Get together with family, and there will be hours of sitting around the table and sharing stories.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22).

Mathis You hate being forced to choose, but you must make a decision to be fair to all. It's easy for you to see clearly what others miss. If you've gone back on a promise, there's a chance to make amends tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Let yourself be inspired by someone — a Leo is a good candidate! A creative project taps your little-used talents. Applause from a crowd makes a difference in your confidence, so get in front of the audience if you can.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Channel nervous energy into work. New romance gets a test; if you have anything in common, you'll still be talking tomorrow. It's in your best interest to make a big deal over a loved one's accomplishments tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). In general, keeping everyone informed is your success key. A loved one doesn't really have your taste but can be (gently!) educated. A friend's ex should be out of bounds to you. Forget it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Concentration is sharp early in the day, so do reading or study then. You're the center of the social swirl later — it seems you're the one everyone wants to know. If you are hosting, there will be a guest you didn't expect.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Come down to earth; pay attention to details, especially legalities. Look at how much your plans are really going to cost — slightly more than you thought. A course correction will be in order.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Slow, steady work keeps a project moving forward. Avoid risky financial speculations. Discover how you are distinguishable from others who do your job and find ways to capitalize on that.

Husband's odd remark angers wife

Dear Abby: I have been married to "Herb" for 27 years, and even though we have a lot of fun ups and downs — mostly due to his verbal abuse — I thought we were relatively happy.

I went to visit my parents for a week. When I returned, I was telling Herb about a major and exciting change in my relationship with my father, when out of the blue he said, "You know, a guy can't help but wonder what it would have been like to have married someone knock-down, drag-dead gorgeous."

I was dumbfounded. I got up and left the room, Herb became angry and said I must not be "mature" enough to hear his innermost thoughts. Abby, where does a question like that come from? How could I have handled what he said without taking it personally? Am I missing any hidden red flags here? What would you have said? — Flabbergasted in Ohio

Dear Flabbergasted: You're not missing any red flags with your husband. In the first sentence of your letter you labeled him verbally abusive, and your assessment is on target. Considering that you were suck-punched, I'd say you handled the situation with great restraint and maturity. A lesser woman would have replied, "And what makes you think you have what it takes to attract, or to keep, a woman like that?"

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: I am 38 and have never married. I got up and left the room, Herb became angry and said I must not be "mature" enough to hear his innermost thoughts. Abby, where does a question like that come from? How could I have handled what he said without taking it personally? Am I missing any hidden red flags here? What would you have said? — Flabbergasted in Ohio

I have often felt, and still do, that women look for the "bad boy" or the guy with deep pockets. However, it seems that now they're past their prime and have the two kids the bad boy left them with, I am now good enough — even though I haven't changed. I have had more female "encounters" in my 30s than I ever did in my 20s.

How do you determine the legitimate ones from the ones who just want you to help raise their kids? If I was good enough for them, why should they be good enough for me now?

— Not the Consolation Prize, Chesterton, Ind.

Dear Not: If you are still seeing women as shallow as the ones you tried to date in your 20s, you should not involve yourself with any of them. From the tone of your letter, I suspect you will be happier remaining single.

Letters for this column — with your name and phone number — should be addressed to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Readers can write to Abby on the Internet at <http://www.usexpress.com/dearabby>. Universal Press Syndicate.

WHAT THE TRAINER GAVE THE GREYHOUND DURING HIS MORNING WORKOUT.

(Answers tomorrow)

Fiance far too close with ex-wife

Dear Annie: For the past year, I have been dating "Patrick," a wonderful man who loves me and my children. The problem? He has an ongoing friendship with his ex-wife and the man she left Patrick for.

"Della" and her new husband call us at least once a week to get together, and then she reminisces about their entire 32-year marriage — the places they went, the people they knew, the things they did. The first few times, I sat and listened, but I've since let Patrick know I feel uncomfortable during their walks down memory lane. He assures me they are just friends and has promised to focus less on the past.

Recently, Patrick announced to Della that we are engaged. She cried and privately told me she felt jealous. Something seems not quite right about this situation. Though they both say they are over it, she still acts like a possessive wife. She calls Patrick and confides about her problems with her husband, and I recently was upset to learn that Patrick told her about a little spat we had.

Patrick says he wants to stay on friendly terms with Della because they have grown children together. I do not want to spend the rest of my life feeling like The Other Woman. Any insight you can offer would be greatly appreciated.

— Please Help Me, I've Fallen in South Dakota

Dear S.D.: It's nice for ex-spouses to remain friendly, but Patrick's relationship with Della is overly clumsy. They should not be sharing confidences about their respective significant others. And since Della has made it clear she still carries a minor torch for her ex, this closeness is asking for trouble.

Patrick needs to create some distance from Della so your upcoming marriage will have a chance to cement itself. Insist that these get-togethers dwindle down to a few times a year, and tell Patrick that there will be no more conversations with his ex-wife about your relationship unless you initiate them.

Dear Annie: I'd like to express my opinion about brides who have their shower guests pre-address their own thank-you notes. I am offended that I must help the unfortunate bride and groom in a task expressing their gratitude. Perhaps smaller guest lists would not overwhelm those couples.

— L.B.

Dear L.B.: Showers weren't originally intended to be such enormous affairs, but that genie is out of the bottle. Also, most women now have full-time jobs and less time. But we agree, you shouldn't invite more people than you are willing to thank properly.

A WEEKLY LOOK AT MOTORSPORTS

Strong, silent type

Unsung Biffle might be man to beat in Nextel Cup

BY MIKE HARRIS
The Associated Press

PONTANA, Calif. People tend to overlook Greg Biffle. At 35, he certainly isn't one of NASCAR's so-called Young Guns, nor is he a big talker who elicits much attention. But Biffle definitely has credentials.

A newspaper recently did an anonymous survey of 15 Nextel Cup drivers, asking their opinion on the best in the series. Biffle was on a very short list led by four-time champion Jeff Gordon.

Biffle is the only driver to have won championships in the Busch and Craftsman Truck series. Now, he's giving every indication of being a serious contender for another title in his third full season on NASCAR's top circuit.

"Biffle is no surprise to anybody in the NASCAR garage," said teammate and series champion Kurt Busch. "Everybody knows what a good driver he is and how tough he is and that No. 16 team can be if they put it all together."

Although his first two years in the Cup series produced finishes of 20th and 17th in the standings, the driver from Vancouver, Wash., has four victories. But two of those wins have come in his last three races—the season-finales last year at Homestead-Miami Speedway and last Sunday at California Speedway.

The victory at California was particularly impressive, with Biffle twice coming from far back in the field and leading the last 23 laps.

It was apparently no surprise to Biffle, who predicted he would win the race after testing at the track in January.

"After that test, I had a pretty strong feeling that we would win out here if something crazy didn't happen," he explained.

But that doesn't mean it was easy. He muscled his ill-handling Ford to the end, beating hard-charging Jimmie Johnson by six car-lengths.

"This was the toughest of my life to earn," Biffle said. "We overcame more in that race than I ever have in a race car. The car was so loose at times I could hardly keep it going in the right direction, and I didn't know why."

Now, thanks to that masterful driving job—and despite a 25th-place finish in the season-opening Daytona 500—Biffle is fifth in the standings, trailing leader Busch by 67 points.

Biffle gave car owner Jack Roush his first NASCAR title when he won the truck championship in 2000, and added the Busch championship two years later. Now, Biffle would like nothing better than to present his boss a third straight Cup title.

Matt Kenseth gave Roush his first in 2003. "I've learned a lot about myself and the way you have to race to win in Nextel Cup," said Biffle, who has been in some trouble on the track by being overly aggressive. "I really think we've got everything we need to be contenders."

"I think Jack gives us everything we need. Now we just have to put it together and make it happen."

It wouldn't surprise crew chief Doug Richert if Biffle becomes the first driver to win titles in all three of NASCAR's top touring circuits.

"I really feel this team is ready," Richert said. "The team has matured, and we've figured out what we need to give Greg for him to win."

Richert knows a bit about calling the shots for championship teams. He was the crew chief in 1980, when the late Dale Earnhardt won the first of his record-tying seven titles.

Roush, who also fields Cup cars for Busch, Kenseth, longtime star Mark Martin and promising newcomer Carl Edwards, has stood behind Biffle even when the driver made disparaging remarks about the team last year.

"There has never been any doubt about his talent," said Roush, who signed Biffle sight unseen after a recommendation from former NASCAR champion Benny Parsons. "He has the ability to do just about anything he wants in this sport, and I expect him to do it for our team."

But, after just two of 36 races, Biffle doesn't want anybody to get too excited.

He shrugged when asked if his victory here is a sign of things to come.

"I don't know," Biffle said. "I'll let everyone else figure that one out."

Greg Biffle's victory in the Auto Club 500 on Sunday was only his third in Nextel Cup, but was his second in the past three races. Biffle also is the only driver to win championships in the Busch and Craftsman Truck series.

Calhoun joins the club

Connecticut coach joins Krzyzewski and Boeheim with 700th victory as Huskies batter Georgetown

By DONNA TOMMELLE

The Associated Press

STORRS, Conn. — For the third time this season, and second in time less than a week, another name was added to the list of coaches with 700 victories.

Jim Calhoun became the 18th Division I coach — and seventh active — to reach the mark when No. 15 Connecticut beat Georgetown 83-64 on Wednesday night. Duke's Mike Krzyzewski reached the milestone in December and Syracuse's Jim Boeheim got there last Saturday.

"This is a very special night for Connecticut. It's a special night for me and it's a very special night for our players," Calhoun said. "A coach is only a reflection of so many assistants and great players."

Calhoun, 62, is in his 33rd year as a coach, won 248 games in 14 seasons at Northeastern and has 452 in 19 seasons at Connecticut, which he transformed from a decent regional program into a national power.

He has led the Huskies to two national championships (1999 and 2004), 14 Big East titles and an NIT championship.

Some of his former players who are now NBA stars — Ray Allen, Richard Hamilton, Emeke Okafor — congratulated Calhoun in a video tribute shown after the game.

His current players did their part, too.

Charlie Villanueva scored 24 points and freshman Rudy Gay added a season-high 20 in a game that turned into a celebration in the late going. The sellout crowd

"It means we're either getting older or getting better. Let's just hope we're getting better."

Jim Boeheim
Syracuse coach and 700-game winner

of 10,167 stood for the closing seconds, chanting "700" and wildly waving placards printed with the number.

"We were definitely focused and pumped up for this game," Villanueva said. "We wanted to do this for Coach and we did."

The Huskies (20-6, 12-3) made sure they put this one away early, well ahead of the celebration. The Huskies have been one of the hottest teams in the conference down the stretch, winning their last eight Big East games, to tie Boston College for first place.

The streak is due in large part to the emergence of point guard Marcus Williams, who leads the league in assists. He finished with 11 points and eight assists Wednesday.

"He makes us go," Calhoun said of Williams. "He throws passes that most kids can't see. He makes everybody's jobs so much easier."

The Hoyas (16-10, 8-7) continued to slide, losing their fourth straight. Freshman J.J. Green led Georgetown with 17 points and helped get the Hoyas out to a quick start.

Green opened the game with a three-pointer as the Hoyas hit their first three shots from beyond the arc and played the Huskies close for several minutes. The Hoyas' biggest lead was 19-15 with 12:10 left, but it didn't last long.

The Huskies blew open the game with a stifling press and 20-3 run that started with a driving layup by Williams.

He also assisted on spectacular dunks by Villanueva and Gay. But what brought the fans to their feet was Williams' steal and over-the-head half-court pass to Gay who was fouled as he went in for the dunk. Gay hit both shots to cap the run and give Connecticut a 39-24 lead. Gay's fallaway at the basket put Connecticut up 41-26 at halftime.

Georgetown would get no closer than 14 points thereafter and the Huskies' ever-intense coach made sure his team played hard until the end. He angrily flung his sport coat in the middle of an 11-2 Georgetown run early in the second half and called a timeout. The Huskies quickly regrouped and the rout was on.

"Everything he does, he wants you to be as successful as you can be," Williams said. "His expectations are high because he knows you can achieve. It's an honor to be here with Coach."

Boeheim, whose Orange (24-5) close the regular season Saturday at Storrs, also was part of the video tribute and welcomed Calhoun into the 700 club.

"It means we're either getting older or getting better," Boeheim said. "Let's just hope we're getting better. We'll see you Saturday."

Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun blows a kiss to the crowd following the Huskies' 83-64 defeat of Georgetown, Calhoun's 700th career victory.

Seniors have their day in Kentucky home finale

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — If it weren't true, it would be an unbelievably happy story line: Two seniors — one of whom had been playing time during his career — starred in their final home game.

Chuck Hayes and Josh Carrier went out in style Wednesday night, leading No. 3 Kentucky to a 73-61 victory over Tennessee.

Hayes scored nine of his 13 points in the final 5½ minutes for the Wildcats (23-3, 14-1), who already had clinched the Southeastern Conference title. Kentucky has one regular-season game remaining, on Sunday at Florida.

That Hayes starred against Tennessee wasn't too surprising since the forward has started 102 consecutive games. Carrier's performance was unexpected.

The guard made his first career start and set career highs for minutes (19) and points (nine) while shooting 3-for-5 from three-point range. And his three-pointers came at opportune moments for Kentucky.

"It was a well-played-out script for two young men who are finishing their careers in front of their fans," Kentucky coach Tubby Smith said. "If you were writing a script about how you want the game to play out, it unfolded the right way."

Men's Top 25 Roundup

"Chuck made the plays down the stretch when we needed clutch scoring. We kept going to him and he kept delivering. Josh made his pieces in the first half and really did a good job defensively against Chris Lofton."

The Volunteers (12-16, 5-10) hung with the Wildcats for most of the game, tying it 55-55 with 8:25 left on the fifth three-pointer of the game by Lofton, a freshman guard who was Kentucky's Mr. Basketball in 2004.

Tennessee didn't score again until 1:53 remained, and Kentucky scored 16 of the next 18 points to extend its winning streak over the Volunteers to seven games.

After Lofton's chance, Tennessee missed three baskets to take the lead before Hayes gave the Wildcats the lead for good with a three-point play with 5:18 left. That was Kentucky's first basket in more than 9½ minutes.

Hayes — who missed all but 6 minutes of the first half after picking up two early fouls — seemed determined to make sure the Wildcats won his last home game.

When Kentucky trailed 58-55, Hayes came up with a breakthrough after making a steal. On Kentucky's next possession, he worked underneath for a basket, making it 63-55 with 3:15 left.

Hayes capped his burst with a dunk with 1:23 left, and the fan favorite left to a standing ovation with 54 seconds left. He finished 5-for-6 from the field.

Hayes and Carrier teamed up after the game, when they joined their teammates and a crowd of 24,205 in singing "My Old Kentucky Home."

"I think it would get to me and I don't think I'd cry," Hayes said. "I tried to look at the ground when they played 'My Old Kentucky Home,' but I looked up and saw all the signs. It just came over me at once and hit me."

No. 4 Wake Forest 98, Georgia Tech 91: Vytas Danielius had 17 points and 11 rebounds and the Demon Deacons (25-4, 12-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) rallied from 11 points down in the second half to finish 16-0 at home. Jarrett Jack had 23 points for the Yellow Jackets (16-10, 7-8).

No. 7 Kansas 72, Kansas State 65: Senior Wayne Simien had 25 points and a career-high 20 rebounds as Kansas (22-4, 12-3 Big 12) celebrated the 50th anniversary of the first game played at Allen Fieldhouse. The Jayhawks clinched at least a tie for the Big 12 championship with their 30th straight victory over the Wildcats (15-11, 5-10).

No. 8 Oklahoma State 69, Texas A&M 63: John Lucas III scored 27 points for the Cowboys (21-5, 11-4 Big 12), who snapped a two-game losing streak by hitting 15 straight free throws down the stretch. Oklahoma State extended the nation's longest current home winning streak to 29 games.

No. 14 Michigan St. 69, Northwestern 58: Maurice Ager scored 20 points, including a clutch three-pointer with 3:30 left that curtailed Northwestern's comeback from an 18-point deficit, as the visiting Spartans (21-5, 12-3 Big Ten) won for the seventh time in eight games.

No. 19 Villanova 79, Seton Hall 58: Randy Foye scored 27 points as the Wildcats (20-6, 10-5 Big East) reached 20 victories for the first time since 2000.

No. 21 Alabama 94, Auburn 53: Earnest Shelton and Kennedy Winston each scored 24 points for the Crimson Tide (22-6, 11-4 Southeastern Conference), while Auburn (12-16, 3-12), lost its fifth straight.

No. 22 Cincinnati 77, Tulane 56: Jihad Muhammad made six three-pointers and scored a career-high 24 points as the Bearcats (23-6, 11-4 Conference USA) handed Tulane (9-17, 3-12) its fifth straight loss.

With much fanfare, Nats spring into action

Washington debuts with 5-3 win over Mets

BY HOWARD FENDRICH
The Associated Press

VIERA, Fla. — It had been 12,207 days since a team represented Washington on a major league diamond.

For the fans and the players, it seemed to be worth the wait, even if this was only spring training.

With "Nationals" stitched on home white jerseys for the first time, and with a vocal near-sellout crowd in the stands, the team formerly known as the Montreal Expos beat the New York Mets and new manager Willie Randolph 5-3 Wednesday in the spring training opener for both teams.

"We're the Washington Nationals now, we're not the Montreal Expos anymore. It's nice to be in one place, and not traveling like those guys were traveling last year," said outfielder Jose Guillen, who hit a two-run homer in his first game since being acquired from the Angels.

"That's one of the reasons [general manager Jim Bowden] brought me here. I said, 'If you're in the same situation, don't even ask me here.' He promised me we were going to have a home."

It's about time, after the Expos weathered the threat of contraction, "home" games in Puerto Rico, and a drawn-out agreement to move to Washington. The nation's capital had its first game since the Senators left for Texas after the 1971 season.

"It was special because of the situation. We're all aware of it. You always try to keep your perspective that it's an exhibition game," Nationals manager Frank Robinson said. "It's the next step, getting a little closer to the real thing, and you do get excited about that. You can't get too up, though."

Tell that to the fans.

An announced sellout of 7,558 began arriving more than five hours before game time,

JONATHAN NEWTON/The Washington Post

The Washington Nationals take the field Wednesday for their spring training opener. The attendance of 7,558 was larger than the crowd for half of the team's final 14 games in Montreal.

hoping for a photo, autograph — or just a glimpse of a player. The line at the stadium gates was several dozen deep when they opened 1½ hours before the first pitch.

The attendance was bigger than it was for half of the team's final 14 games in Montreal. Even the Mets were impressed by the turnout.

"It was pretty cool. It's not often that the first game of spring training is nationally televised. I'm happy for those guys," said New York starter Tom Glavine, who allowed two hits in two scoreless innings.

Washington's starters sprinted onto the field at 1:02 p.m. EST, and a minute later came another first in Nationals history, albeit a tad more dubious: the debut of the team theme song, "We Are the Washington Nationals," which sounded like AC/DC. Blessed Union of Souls recorded the song and offered it to Bowden.

"I was wondering, 'What's going on?' It was like head-banging, then it said 'Nationals' and it was pretty cool," outfielder Brad Wilkerson said. "It's pretty cool to have your own song. It was pretty upbeat. We didn't have a song in Montreal."

There were a lot of positive signs for the Nationals on Wednesday.

Starter Tony Armas Jr., who missed most of the past two seasons after major shoulder surgery, worked two hitless innings with two strikeouts. He threw 28 pitches and said he didn't feel any pain.

The three key new position players — Guillen, Cristian Guzman and Vinny Castilla — each had a hit. Jose Vidro, who missed the final six weeks last season to have right knee surgery, singled and scored a run.

Chad Cordero struck out the side in the ninth, putting the Nationals' first victory in the books.

"We're undefeated. We've never lost a game, so that's exciting," Bowden said.

Robinson feted by Congress

BY ERICA WERNER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jackie Robinson was posthumously awarded a Congressional Gold Medal on Wednesday, more than half a century after breaking baseball's color barrier.

President Bush gave Congress' highest honor to Robinson's widow, Rachel Robinson, in a state ceremony in the Capitol Rotunda. The Democratic and Republican leaders of the House and Senate and the commissioner of major league baseball looked on.

"His story is one that shows what one person can do to hold America to account to its founding promise of freedom and equality," Bush said. "It's a lesson for people coming up to see. One person can make a big difference in setting the tone of this country."

When Robinson joined the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947, professional baseball was segregated. He died in 1972 and his No. 42 was retired throughout baseball in 1997.

"This medal confirms what we know," Rachel Robinson said. "Jackie Robinson stands as a heroic role model for all Americans who believe in justice and equality."

Speakers extolled Robinson as a courageous athlete who suffered taunts and slurs from fans and fellow players, ignoring them as he proved to be a brilliant ballplayer and a civil rights hero.

World Series champs have fun at the White House

BY PATRICK DICKSON
Stars and Stripes

WASHINGTON — It was a clear day, with the wind blowing out. A perfect day for Boston Red Sox baseball.

President Bush welcomed members of the 2004 World Series champions to the White House on Wednesday in front of a few hundred members of Red Sox Nation.

The fans started chants of "Here we go, Red Sox, here we go" punctuated by the obligatory "Yankees suck!" as they waited for the President and Vice President Dick Cheney to appear.

"The last time this team won a championship, Woodrow Wilson lived here," the president said.

Bush worked the crowd with a number of jokes directed toward the team, singling out center fielder Johnny Damon.

"I appreciate the way this team played baseball," he said. "It took a lot of guts, and it took a lot of hair."

Damon whipped his trademark bunt around.

But, Bush said, "No one expected the answer to the curse of the Bambino would be a bunch of idiots," referring to the team's self-assigned moniker. "But those guys don't know baseball."

Curt Schilling, who pitched in the postseason despite a sutured ankle, and catcher Jason Varitek, the team's new captain, presented President Bush a home jersey with No. 43, and Cheney with an away jersey with his name and No. 2.

The ceremony got a late start; schedules got bumped up because the president had earlier posthumously awarded Jackie Robinson a Congressional gold medal.

Most of the squad flew in from spring training in Ft. Myers, Fla. Notably absent was World Series MVP Manny Ramirez, whose team officials said was visiting his sick grandmother.

The team was joined by former Red Sox Don DMaggio, Jimmy Piersall and Johnny Pesky, who played on the 1946 team that lost the World Series to the St. Louis Cardinals in seven games. The Sox swept the Cards in 2004.

Damon, Varitek, David Ortiz and Kevin Millar met with reporters afterward.

Asked what they thought of the visit, they didn't miss a beat.

"We don't think, remember?" Damon said with a grin.

"No, that's last year's thing," Millar said. "We need a new stick."

They laughed when asked a question about Yankee third baseman Alex Rodriguez, who has had a war of words with some Boston players since the Red Sox beat the Yankees in last year's playoffs.

"All right, the first A-Rod question," Millar laughed, then wondered aloud when the first steroid question would be.

Soon it was asked, and Millar responded with a dead-on impersonation of basketball announcer Mary Albert — "Yes!"

Varitek answered.

"I will not get any smaller this year, OK?"

Following the ceremony, the players went up 16th Street to visit some of the wounded at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

The Sox seemed moved as they shook hands and spoke with recovered service members in the Physical Therapy Clinic, according to a Walter Reed press release. Media were not allowed to accompany the team on the visit.

Many servicemen shared their stories about how they were injured fighting in the war on terrorism, and the players listened intently as they signed autographs on caps, baseballs and T-shirts they brought to give out to the patients.

As for the White House visit, the four agreed it was "truly an honor," as Millar noted.

"I'm a huge Bush fan," Damon said. "He'd fit right in with this team."

Does that mean he's an idiot? a reporter asked.

"You said that," Damon said. And the captain jumped in.

"Let's close this up. No. He is not an idiot."

Receivers are first day's big catch

Moss traded; free agent Mason signs with Ravens

By BARRY WILNER
The Associated Press

Receivers grabbed the headlines on the first day of NFL free agency.

Derrick Mason, who led all wideouts with 96 catches last season, joined Baltimore on Wednesday. T.J. Houshmandzadeh, coming off a career year, stayed with Cincinnati. Randy Moss' trade from Minnesota to Oakland became official, and tight end Marcus Pollard was released by Indianapolis.

Mason, 31, should give a boost to one of the most feeble passing offenses around. The Ravens ranked 31st in passing last season and their leading receiver, Kevin Johnson, had 35 receptions. Mason had nearly as many as Baltimore's top three pass catchers.

"We were high on his list, and he was high on our list," Ravens general manager Ozzie Newsome said. "He was really the only receiver we have had any active discussions with thus far. What this does is we bring in a veteran receiver who has the type of attitude and type of personality that we look for in a football player."

Mason's 96 catches trailed only Kansas City tight end Tony Gonzalez last year and accounted for 1,168 yards and seven touchdowns.

"The signing of Derrick Mason is the most substantial move we've made, particularly in free agency, particularly at the wide receiver position," Ravens coach Brian Billicek said. "When you take someone of Derrick Mason's caliber, you expect to have an impact."

Pollard played a big role in the development of the potent Indianapolis offense led by Peyton Manning. But the Colts saved $2.65 million in salary cap space by releasing the 10-year veteran.

Houshmandzadeh made a strong impact for the Bengals in his breakthrough 2004 season. He caught 73 passes for 978 yards and four touchdowns and was particularly effective when Peter Warrick was injured.

"It was tempting to get out and really test the water as a free agent, but in my heart, what I wanted was to be in Cincinnati," Houshmandzadeh said. "I told my agents that, and they were able to get a good deal done."

"I'm glad to have it all off my mind so I can start getting focused. I think the Bengals are going to have a great season, and

New Oakland wide receiver Randy Moss smiles during a news conference on Wednesday, at the Raiders' headquarters in Alameda, Calif., after the team completed a trade with the Vikings for the star receiver.

I want to be a part of it."

Moss didn't want to be a part of the Vikings any longer and the deal with Oakland was struck last week. The Raiders traded a No. 1 pick, seventh overall, linebacker Napoleon Harris and a later draft choice for Moss.

"Who wouldn't want to be in the Silver and Black?" Moss asked. "I'm committed to excellence and I just want to win, baby."

Moss, 28, will provide a huge upgrade to an offense determined to return to the high-powered vertical passing game of years past. It was their proficient passing attack that led the Raiders to the Super Bowl after the 2002 season won 48-21 by Tampa Bay.

"I don't see this team slipping with the addition of me. I just see them adding more firepower," Moss said.

Moss was bothered by a hamstring injury for most of last season and didn't reach 1,000 yards receiving for the first time in his seven-year career. He finished with 49 catches for 767 yards and 13 touchdowns.

When healthy, though, he is a fearsome downfield threat.

"If he's not the best, he's certainly one of the best," Raiders quarterback Kerry Collins said. "You can make a strong argument. Everybody has their own opinions. But ask any quarterback around the league which receiver they'd want, and I think most would say Randy Moss."

■ In addition to Moss, Oakland was closing in on signing Jets backup runner LaMont Jordan, who spent four years behind Curtis Martin in New York, but averaged 4.9 yards per carry.

"There's no question we're working on signing a running back," coach Norv Turner said. "I don't know where we're at. He's certainly a guy we're familiar with. We know a lot about him."

"We have a deal in principle that he should sign tomorrow morning — 99.9 percent sure he will be a Raider," Jordan's agent, Alvin Keels, said in an e-mail Wednesday night.

Oakland released veteran running back Tyrone Wheatley on Wednesday, along with defensive tackle John Parrella.

■ The Vikings added more defensive help by agreeing to terms with tackle Pat Williams, late of Buffalo, on a three-year deal worth $13 million, with a $6 million signing bonus. The eight-year veteran should bolster a line that has Pro Bowl tackle Kevin Williams but ranked 28th on defense last season.

■ The Bills' other coveted free agent, left tackle Jason Jennings, was close to signing with the San Francisco 49ers.

Jennings, a four-year vet, generally is considered the top free agent available at his position. Jennings' agent, Todd France, met with 49ers officials all day at club headquarters, and ESPN.com reported a deal had been reached.

■ Cleveland traded defensive tackle Gerard Warren, the third overall pick in the 2001 draft, to Denver for a fourth-round draft choice. The Broncos need help up front after deciding not to re-sign free agent Reggie Hayward, who led the club with 10½ sacks last season.

On Thursday, Hayward signed with the Jacksonville Jaguars.

The contract pays the defensive end $25 million with $10 million guaranteed.

Then the Browns signed guard Joe Andruzzi, a starter on one of three of New England's Super Bowl winners, to a four-year, $9 million deal that reunites him with new Browns coach Romeo Crennel, the former Patriots defensive coordinator.

"Joe is a tough, hard-nosed, blue-collar football player," Crennel said. "He gives us flexibility by being able to play both left and right guard and he will add stability to our offensive line."

■ St. Louis signed 32-year-old linebacker Dexter Coakley, one day after he was released by Dallas. Coakley is fourth on the Cowboys' career tackles list with 1,046, but Dallas cut him rather than pay a $500,000 roster bonus.

■ Dallas bolstered its defense by filling one of its pressing needs when the Cowboys signed cornerback Anthony Henry to a five-year contract. Henry had four interceptions last season, starting 14 games with Cleveland.

The Cowboys scheduled a news conference for Thursday morning to introduce Henry. The cornerback might not be the only new player involved, but team officials said they would have no more announcements before then.

Defensive tackle Jason Ferguson, one of the team's top offensive tackles, and Pro Bowl offensive guard Marco Rivera, were both in Dallas talking to team officials Wednesday.

Culpepper denies he instigated big trade

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS

Vikings quarterback Daunte Culpepper is bewildered and hurt by suggestions he was responsible for the departure of wide receiver Randy Moss.

In an interview with the Star Tribune for Thursday's editions, Culpepper insisted he did nothing to force the trade the Vikings finalized with the Oakland Raiders earlier Wednesday.

Culpepper acknowledged he did not always approve of Moss' conduct, but said overlooking the loss of his top receiver will be as difficult as dealing with his flaws.

"This trade, I hated to see it," Culpepper told the Star Tribune. "I guess it's a business, and as a team we have to move on. One thing we know, by looking at New England, is that teams win championships on individuals. But there's no way we can replace Randy. There's no way to find a guy that does what he does."

As a team, we're going to have to find a way to pick up the slack.

"I can't speak for everybody," Culpepper continued. "Moss rubbed everybody in different ways, but he wasn't that bad of a guy. He's certainly a way of going about things and there were things that I definitely disagreed with him on. But he's still my friend and I never had any real beef with him."

Culpepper said comments he made at the Pro Bowl that some interpreted as approving a trade were misunderstood.

"I never wanted to see Randy leave. And I never said that. I don't know how it got out that I did. I want to make that clear."

Maybe the Vikings organization was ready to move on, but that was never what I was saying. He's a once-in-a-lifetime player," he said.

Last month, at the Pro Bowl, Culpepper said of Moss: "He's my good friend, but you almost get to thinking that maybe enough is enough. And maybe the Vikings organization has had enough."

The Vikings have said little about their reasons for making the trade. In a statement Wednesday, owner Red McCombs said only: "We have decided to go in a different direction at this point."

Other team officials deferred comment ahead of McCombs' teleconference with reporters Thursday.

Bryant, accuser settle civil suit

NBA star reaches deal to end sexual assault case; terms undisclosed

BY JON SARCHÉ
The Associated Press

DENVER — With a terse news release and an even terser court filing, the sordid sexual assault case against Kobe Bryant that gripped the nation abruptly ended with an agreement that ensures the NBA star never goes to trial for what happened in a hotel room two years ago.

Few experts believed the civil lawsuit would ever be heard by a jury, saying it was unlikely that Bryant and the 20-year-old woman who accused him of raping her relished the prospect of having to divulge potentially embarrassing, intimate details in a courtroom.

The case tarnished both Bryant, 27, arguably the NBA's best player, and the woman, a former high school cheerleader who once tried out for "American Idol" and found herself the subject of Internet speculation.

Terms of the settlement were not released. Law experts said the agreement probably spelled out financial penalties for revealing any details.

Los Angeles Lakers' Kobe Bryant shoots during warmups prior to a game against the Boston Celtics in Boston on Wednesday.

A two-sentence statement faxed to The Associated Press by Bryant's attorneys said only that the matter had been resolved

"to the satisfaction of both parties."

"The parties and their attorneys have agreed that no further comments about the matter can or will be made," the statement said. A one-sentence motion for dismissal stipulating that the case can never be refiled was filed simultaneously in Denver federal court.

After a few more days of intense speculation about Wednesday's settlement — how much money, whether any details can ever be released — the case will quickly fade from view, said Denver attorney Scott Robinson.

"Ultimately a new scandal, a new public shame will come along and both the plaintiff and the defendant can pretty much go about their lives," he said.

A Los Angeles Lakers spokesman said Bryant had declined comment on the settlement. Bryant scored 26 points Wednesday night in Boston, but the Celtics still beat the Lakers 104-101.

"It's in both parties' interests to have this remain confidential," said Los Angeles attorney Steve Cron, who is familiar with celebrity cases. "That's one of the incentives for them to settle: He didn't have to do a deposition, the lurid details wouldn't be posted on some Web site, she didn't have to face the rigors of having a deposition by his lawyers and she'll gain some privacy as well."

The lawsuit, filed three weeks before the criminal case against Bryant collapsed last summer, sought unspecified damages for mental injuries, public scorn and humiliation the woman said she has suffered since their June 2003 encounter at the Vail-area hotel where she worked. The woman hasn't commented publicly on the case.

Bryant, a married father of one, apologized for his "behavior that night and for the consequences she has suffered," but insisted the sex was consensual.

Shortly after jury selection began in the criminal case, prosecutors in Eagle County dropped the single felony sexual assault count after the woman told them she couldn't take part in a trial.
